New Celluloid Birlas and Dalmias

Whenever there is a shortage of raw films in the country, we find Chandulal Shah of Ranjit at the head of the raw stock distributing committee which is always formed, in what seems like a collusion with the Kodak people who are the largest importers of raw films in this country.

No sooner there is a sufficiency of supply, Chandulal Shah disappears from the IMPPA deliberations and is usually found on the race course.

Strange though it seems this phenomenon repeats itself at regular intervals of raw stock scarcity and one wonders whether Chandulal's interest in the Indian film industry begins and ends with the raw stock position in the country. Is he afraid of losing his share of the spoils if he is not on the committee that decides to allocate the raw film supplies to the different producers from day to day?

There is no denying the unfortunate fact that there is an acute shortage of raw stock in spite of the Government's permission to import a liberal supply. No one knows exactly whether this shortage is artificial or due to causes beyond the control of the manufacturers and importers of the raw films.

One fact, however, stands out significantly that whenever there is a shortage of raw films, artificial or unavoidable, quite a few people make quite a bit of money by selling a part of the stock in the black market.

There are two ways of feeding the black market in films. One is by giving the stock to stooges who have production companies merely on letter heads and conduct dormant film laboratories and the other way is to dole out a couple of tins every time to small producers who cannot do any substantial work with these and are compelled to resell the tins in the black market before the film emulsion gets time-barred.

Another disgusting feature of this unofficial raw film control is the willing co-operation which a reputed business firm like Kodaks lends to the strong clique of producers who are members of the Producers' Association.

One fails to understand by what canons of business morality can the management of Kodak (India) Ltd. justify its rather too willing co-operation with the influential members of the IMPPA in doling or denying raw stocks to the favoured few or otherwise, seeing that the main mission of Kodaks is to import raw films and sell it to people who ask and pay for it.

If what has been reported to us by several reliable producers is true, Kodaks are also guilty of rank impoliteness and Hitlerian behaviour. It seems that the producers who call at the Kodak offices in Fort, are made to dance attendance on the gentleman who is evidently in charge of the raw film sales. This man, it is said, often becomes rude to the point of disgust and many film producers, who are always cash customers, are often unceremoniously shouted at and pushed out of the film godown of Kodaks. Surely, that is not the code of business conduct with which Kodaks have come to India to trade! Or have they?

In a postwar world there are bound to be shortages of one commodity or other. But does that justify any unnecessary rudeness towards our people by the hirelings of a foreign firm?

Supposing we call upon a couple of these top dogs to give us a glimpse of their present bank balances and overseas remittances during the war, will they be able to justify their present assets with the nominal salaries they have been earning all along? It is a delicate question to ask but one rudeness calls for another and it would do well for these people to be polite to our producers and let the sleeping dogs lie rather than provoke some public spirited person to dig out the gruesome facts of the past and the present and discover the skeleton in the family closet.

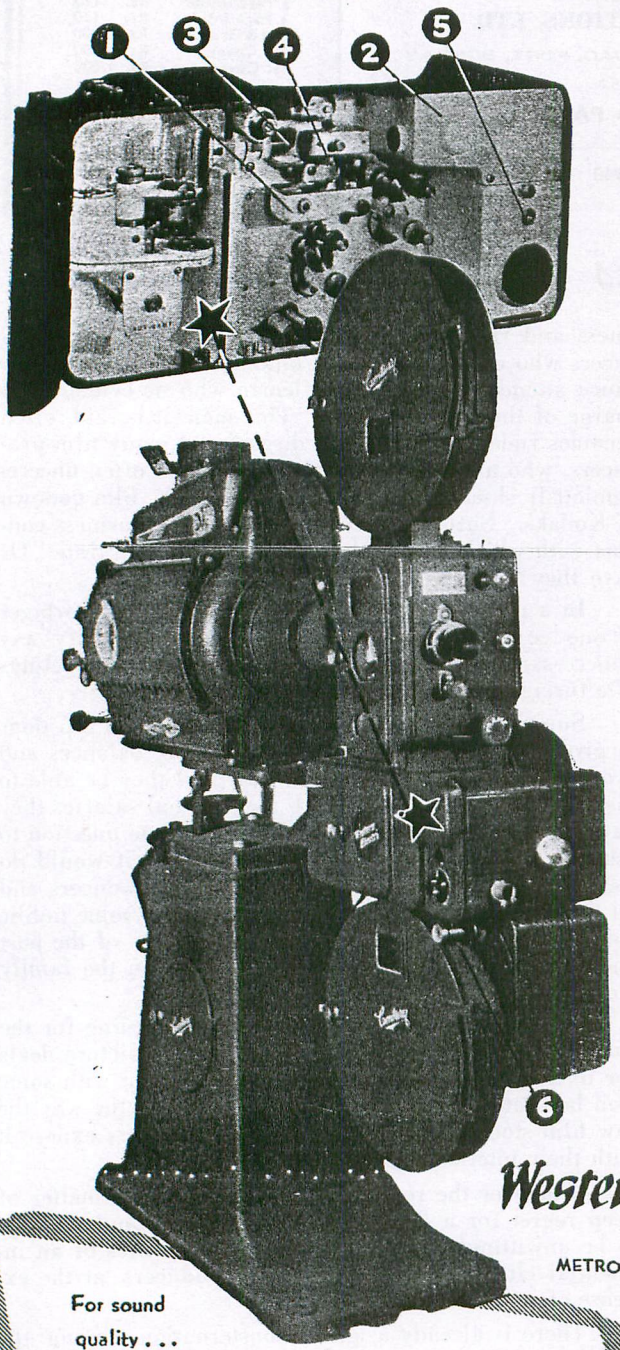
We hope this is taken as a friendly warning for the future and we are not compelled to expose picture deals for distribution nor disturb the merry liaison with some film laboratories which may probably prove the way the raw film stock takes long before the producers expose it with their intellectual stink.

Whatever the real facts may be, it is a matter of deep regret for a firm of Kodak's international prestige to be unwittingly involved in the petty politics of an influential clique of motion picture producers at the expense of small producers.

There is already a great consternation among the small producers at the way they are being elbowed out of their legitimate share of raw stocks by the powerful clique that controls the distribution of raw stocks. And all this with the willing co-operation of Kodaks—a firm with international prestige.

The studio owners have only one axe to grind and that is to choke off as many independent producers as possible so that their own putrid studio products get as little competition as possible. It is a well known fact in the industry that many independent producers often produce better quality pictures than the professional studio owners who generally plan their productions as just so

IT WOULD TAKE volumes . . .



. . . to tell you all about the post-war Westrex Master Sound System. But this list indicates some of its more revolutionary new features.

1. A Hydro Flutter Suppressor that reduces mechanical flutter to less than one-half of the industry's standard.
2. A Built-in Pre-Amplifier that has been reduced to a fraction of the former size.
3. An Electro-tension Governor providing electro-magnetic control of film speed to compensate for fluctuations in motor and sprockets.
4. An Equilight Diffuser helping to produce every sound track—whether density or area—with maximum efficiency.
5. Instantaneous Sound Changeover, performed electrically eliminating manual control.
6. A Hand Brake providing a means of bringing the motor, projector and reproducer mechanism to a quick yet smooth emergency stop.

These and many other electrical and mechanical improvements make the post-war Westrex Master more durable and dependable than ever. It gives your patrons a quality and quantity of sound such as they have never heard before. The Westrex Master is amazingly adaptable. While designed for use with the famous Ashcraft Arc Lamps and Century Projector, it may be used with any standard projection equipment. And remember, too, there are other Westrex models for smaller cinemas and purses.

For sound quality . . . simplicity . . . style . . . adaptability . . . judge it how you will . . . the post-war Westrex Sound System is "Master" on every count.

much more grist to the mill without any thought of quality.

During the slump last year some of these very same studio owners unceremoniously closed down their studios and threw thousands out of employment and threw open the sound stages for hiring by independent producers. Many of them did so not because motion picture production had suddenly become an uneconomic proposition but because the ambitious studio bosses had lost heavily in stock, cotton and race gambling.

At that critical juncture the small independent producers kept up our annual quota of productions by their valiant perseverance in the face of odds and not only supplied the theatres with their day to day requirements but also raised the general standard of our pictures.

These very same people are now being jettisoned in favour of the studio owners most of whom are only time-serving capitalists with love neither for art nor for industry.

The independent producers are fretting and fuming with frustration and are already thinking in terms of an independent body to look after their interests.

It is a well known axiom that big fish eat small ones and if the independents still hope to live with the powerful studio owners and survive they (the independents) are living in a fool's paradise.

How can two conflicting interests ever pull together however sweetly Chandulal Shah may talk and overwhelm the little ones with the sentiment of artificial unity which is not always backed by a hearty and sincere co-operation?

Choking off the independent producers by denying to them the vital raw stocks is to forge a disgraceful cartel of production monopoly which will not only bring down what little quality of production we have at present but also shut off free enterprise which is the main distinguishing feature of our new-found democracy.

The part Kodaks are playing in this game is, to say the least, not worthy of their international traditions. As foreign traders, mainly in India for business, they have no business to align themselves with self-seeking trade monopolists at the expense of general industrial economy which in future must be based on socialistic principles.

If Kodaks are thus misusing their privilege to import raw films into this country, it is high time that the authorities look into the matter more closely and give this international firm some directives as to the exact complexion of our future government of the country.

On the other hand the independent producers would do well either to form a separate association of their own to guard their interests or to put their heavy foot down on the activities of people who are trying to rob them of their fundamental privileges.

If independent producers are to be warned off the field in this manner we have no chance of seeing another "Kalpana" which was produced by an independent producer without a studio.

In a free country, there must be free enterprise and not a cartel of new celluloid Birlas and Dalmias. And film art, above all, needs freedom for its best expression.

Raw Deal To Madras Workers

It is reported that after consulting representatives of the film industry and "studying" the actual needs of the workers, the Commissioner of Labour to the Government of Madras has prescribed a minimum scale of wages for different workers in the film studios.

According to this scale, the highest ceiling of wages is Rs. 100-5-200 for the chief make-up man and the laboratory chief whilst the lowest rung begins from Rs. 20-1-25 for sweepers, setting and moulding assistants and office peons. In between these two points, the cameraman and the recordist are priced at Rs. 60|- each per month while the office head-clerk is allowed Rs. 80|- and the carpenter mistry Rs. 90|- per month.

Of course, in keeping with the universally prevalent practice, a fixed dearness allowance of Rs. 20|- per month is generously granted to all those getting salaries below Rs. 40|- and Rs. 25|- to those getting more than Rs. 40|- per month.

In the Bombay studios, an average cameraman earns Rs. 400|- per month while there are quite a few getting anything between a thousand and fifteen hundred rupees per month. The average recordist also gets as much as the cameraman and often more and there is at least one instance of one Mr. Sharma being paid Rs. 1500|- per month.

The average laboratory chief and the chief setting man earn anything between Rs. 400|- and Rs. 500|- per month.

In "Pugree", a social story of All India Pictures, Dixit, our ace comedian, gives another sterling performance.

The setting coolies get anything from Rs. 60|- to Rs. 100|- a month while sweepers earn well over Rs. 50|- per month.

Admitting that Madras has a slightly lower standard of living in comparison with Bombay, one wonders whether the gulf is so wide as to justify the niggardly scale of wages fixed by the Commissioner of Labour.

From the scale of minimum wages fixed for our South Indian workers, one is compelled to conclude that either the city of Madras is abundant in food, clothing, housing and other necessities of life or that the film workers of the South are all leading an austere life of self-denial like the sages of ancient India living on wild fruit, raw vegetable and leaves, wearing bark and living in huts built in trees and painted with cow-dung.

The Commissioner of Labour either seems to have been misled by the crafty representatives of the South Indian film industry or seems to have lost sight of the realities of the present world around him. In so far as the bare necessities of life are concerned, namely food and clothing, thanks to the clumsy bungling of the various white-capped provincial governments and the ever-changing control, decontrol and recontrol of commodities, the living expenses for the average worker throughout India are almost uniform, especially with the black-marketeer demanding a premium on every morsel of food that any worker has the temerity or means to swallow in these days of super-capitalistic economy.

Half of our workers get hungry due to the strain on their ears, hearing the token lectures and promises given by our leaders at regular intervals with or without any provocation.

To prescribe officially a ridiculous scale of wages to those half-hungry people is to add insult to injury.

Quite a few idiotic things often happen in the South but this is about the most idiotic of them all. In an industry where producers make huge fortunes and often dissipate them in gambling and sex-play, it is unfair for the government to step in and put a ceiling on the earnings of the workers who mainly contribute to the prosperity of the industry.

No government is qualified to interfere with the film industry in this manner as the film studios employ skilled workers with specific talent and such labour cannot be subject to the uniform pattern prescribed for general labour found in other industries.

The Labour Commissioner in Madras had no business to interfere with the workers of the South Indian film industry and thereby provide an official excuse to the film producers to deny equitable wages and due promotions to an honest band of workers who have often saved our indigenous film industry from the ravages of heartless gamblers.

If the Provincial Government of the South believes in justice and fair play it must straightway scrap the stupid and irrational scale of wages fixed by its Labour Commissioner.

Doing so will mean real service to the people. And that is, we guess, what the ministers swore to do when they took office.

FREEBOOTERS OF FREEDOM !

Recently the U. P. Government issued an order that government servants should not take complimentary passes for cinemas. This shows that the government is aware of the weakness of its executives for cinema passes but a merely pious order will be of no avail unless it is enforced rigorously by the authorities. What we have come to identify as the "police blackmail" is as old as our erstwhile slavery and it would need more than an advisory order to stop this racket.

In Lucknow, this order is, however, obeyed only in its breach. The petty government officials not only demand complimentary passes but they even attempt to evade the entertainment tax. The policemen, it is reported, with the exception of a few officers, also protest against payment of entertainment tax. Add to these protests, the family and friendly requirements of the municipal officials and imagine the number of people who see our motion pictures free of cost from week to week without even paying the entertainment tax.

On an average, the cinema owner issues 200 passes per month to please the police. The police are all-powerful and the appeasement policy of the cinema owner, of course inspired by his commercial interests, to avoid minor theatre scuffles with the help of the uniformed arm of law and order must be responsible for distributing passes so profusely.

It is well-known that without the co-operation and support of the police, the cinema hall can be turned into a veritable pandemonium. So co-operation needs a reward and a complimentary pass often helps to restrain the vindictive measures of the little dictators.

This anti-social act is being perpetrated not only by the constables, but by the sub-inspectors and even their relations. The cinema owners, are of course, willing to oblige the police and the sub-inspectors but when it comes to relations, they resent their entry without a ticket or a pass. And yet, they are helpless.

When will the police learn to do their duty honestly and without expecting a reward? We have completed a year of independence and it is high time we acquire a sense of responsibility and national discipline.

The Government of Bombay had passed a similar order a couple of years ago, but the theatre attendances tell an entirely different story these days. True, the policemen avoided our theatres when the ink on the order had still not dried, but things seem to have slid back to the same old racket with the passage of time. Not only are the "little dictators" showing up these days with their profuse families and friends from Konkan, but quite a few others, especially the charitable Zoroastrians, also help to rob our national government of its legitimate entertainment tax by regular free visits. These Parsis, of course, think that they need not pay for "gamthi" pictures as the theatres are generally owned and managed by Parsis.

Will the different provincial Home Ministers tell us how long we can afford to lose our legitimate entertainment tax, seeing that these free-booters rob us and also get themselves entertained in the bargain?

SAVE YOUR SKINS

Every month we receive hundreds of letters from different towns complaining about bad projection in almost all the cinemas.

These complaints are from chronic filmgoers and usually they wouldn't mind seeing even a rotten film under impossible circumstances. Still their patience is being sorely tried and it wouldn't be surprising if some of them soon begin to smash the furniture and start throwing chairs at the theatre owners. These filmgoers have our sympathies because they shell out their hard-earned money with the idea of getting a few hours' relaxation but are actually given some rotten entertainment with a few awful screeches by the heroine.

As it is, the technical quality of our pictures is infernally poor, with photography shunting between a thick mist and glaring sunlight. Add to this, the negligent processing of prints and imagine the amount of optical strain on the human eye. The distributors and the exhibitors contribute their mite to this disgusting episode by criminal handling of the film prints which are often found bathed in the machine oil, thereby squeezing out completely any remaining visibility. Then the sprockets of the projectors take their regular toll and a film loses quite a bit of its original footage by the time it arrives in a small town. For want of care the print also records its protest by snapping several times in the midst of its run, thus throwing the audience into an uproar of protest. Under such heartless conditions no picture can be entertaining, however well produced originally. It is, therefore, no wonder that filmgoers all over the country are in a bad temper.

Even in America, these things sometimes happen and recently it was reported that five hundred filmgoers went wild in a New York theatre, as a result of clumsy projection. The picture was "Man Eater of Kumaon" and the filmgoers in their rage nearly became "man eaters" themselves as the screen let out a weird screech. The screech was followed by flickering images and suddenly the screen went blank. The howling and hooting rose to such an extent that Robert Ungerfeld, the managing director, apologized to his audience and stopped the show.

Our theatre owners lack even this politeness to apologize and yet they would do well to look after their film prints and projectors more carefully in future if they care for their skins. For, the letters we receive smell of ill-humour and it wouldn't be shocking if a crowd of filmgoers in some town suddenly decide to beat up the theatre boss and give him a few first hand lessons in good showmanship.

Most of our showmen are unpunished scoundrels and they richly deserve almost any chastisement they may get. We must, however, avoid such violent situations as they tend to a general breach of peace, a state we cannot tolerate in a free and disciplined nation. If however anything so tragic, happens, the people primarily responsible for the same will be the showmen. They provide the cause which will madden any normal person and filmgoers are no saints.

JAWAHARLAL'S WORD OF HONOUR

Some time in January 1948, the Government of Bombay issued an ordinance controlling the use of building materials for constructing only small tenements and denying permission to build any new cinemas.

This was a sequel to the agitation launched by "filmindia" and the ordinance came in good time, though Congressman Manu Subedar got away with his palatial hotel and his new luxurious cinema at Marine Lines.

We had requested the Government of Bombay to investigate in this matter thoroughly. Home Minister Morarji Desai, it is reported, did not seem to like the complexion of things but thinking discretion to be the better part of valour did not wish to interfere with little Manu's big enterprise which seemed to have a sanction from the Central Government. Official investigations therefore came to an abrupt end and Manu Subedar has been able to complete both the cinema and the hotel. The hotel, moreover, acquired an official recognition when a large crowd of A.I.C.C. members was accommodated there recently. We don't grudge Manu Subedar his good luck but we want to know exactly how many poor quarters could have been built in the building material misused in these two palatial buildings. It is a little problem of democratic mathematics.

Every deed, good or bad, is these days attributed to democracy and democracy is fast taking a new definition. The masses are the usual sufferers and it is big guns like Manu Subedar who get the best out of the Congress government by virtue of their influence and status.

We know that Home Minister Morarji Desai has a stern democratic outlook on life and it is therefore strange that he has not gone to the root of the Manu Subedar scandal. Perhaps it is a case of letting the sleeping dogs lie.

Our present unfortunate lot seems to be to hear mere platitudes of democracy without the supporting acts that take democracy into the home and heart of every citizen.

Recently, in New Delhi, Mr. H. V. Kamath asked in the Parliament whether government would see that building materials which were so scarce were not diverted to the building of cinema houses, restaurants and hotels as had happened in a town in the United Provinces.

Our Prime Minister, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, with his usual commendable impulse gave us an assurance that not a single cinema house would be built in India till other necessary requirements had been met. In fact, the Government of India had asked the provincial governments that even the construction of palatial buildings should be put off for the time being.

In the wake of Pandit Nehru's statement comes the news that the West Bengal government are enquiring as to how 18 cinema houses sprang up in Calcutta within a few months in spite of the fact that no building materials were supplied to those theatre owners by the government. Evidently, there are 18 more Manu-magicians in Calcutta.

This magic of cinema construction is fast distorting the meaning of democracy for us and even a diehard Congressman like me has started wondering whether something is rotten in the State of Denmark. Imagine, therefore, the shock to the poor and needy to see 18 in a row and all to show our usually rotten motion pictures.

Our theatre owners are unblushing capitalists and they are always out to squeeze the last penny from the pockets of our stupid filmgoers. To let these people run wild with precious building material is simply to deny a square deal to our homeless masses. Imagine the sad plight of thousands of refugees who are clamouring for a roof over their head! Add to this, the tragic clamour of the poverty-stricken millions to whom the pavement is a bed and the sky a roof and it is not difficult to understand so much discontent against our present popular ministries.

If the West Bengal Government's investigations ever see the light of day, they should provide a useful guidance to the other provincial governments and help them at least to keep a watchful eye and see that more Manu Subedars don't take advantage of the building materials in the black market.

Black marketing of building materials is evidently going on merrily in Calcutta and at a magical speed. And unless the West Bengal Government take a firm and decisive attitude, nothing is likely to come out of their investigations.

In the meantime, "filmindia" will keep a close watch and wait for the findings of the West Bengal Government, but before then let us pray that Premier B. C. Roy interprets democracy correctly to the poor millions who look up to him for food and shelter.

Why not send these little capitalists to jail for their

WELL DONE, BABURAO PAI!

For the first time after launching the production career of his Famous Pictures, Baburao Pai deserves a pat on his back for having produced a documentary with a difference called "Bapu Ki Amar Kahani".

This one-reeler lyrical record of some of the Mahatma's outstanding achievements shown, appropriately enough, during the Independence Week at the Metro Cinema is, on the whole, a creditable attempt to compress within the limitations of a thousand feet of celluloid the epic of the birth of a "New God" without a single jarring note or unseemly effect as it were.

While "filmindia's" warning against the picturization of a full-length biography of Gandhiji by any single producer has already had a salutary effect in dissuading many producers who were toying with the idea, one was nevertheless sceptical of the result of this Famous enterprise but the makers of "Bapu Ki Amar Kahani" have been well-advised to refrain from any impersonation of the Mahatma on the screen.

Instead, they have cleverly succeeded in building up Bapu's personality by substituting his statues, photographs and images which is certainly a laudable alternative to the possible drawbacks and limitations of any actor impersonating the Mahatma.

"Bapu Ki Amar Kahani" thus becomes a symbolic documentary produced effectively and with a sincerity of purpose that need not be questioned after witnessing it. And although the picture lacks the tragic atmosphere of "Bapu Ki Antim Yatra", distributed by the IMPPA soon after the Mahatma's death, it has an appeal and significance of its own and must as such be widely exhibited throughout the country. Well done, Baburao Pai!

We also appreciate Metro's enterprise in screening their very first film in Hindustani, even though it was a documentary of a thousand feet and we hope this temporary display of courage may one day lead to the screening of a full length feature film in Hindustani.

COMEDY WITH A FOREIGN THEME

Though we have had a number of enjoyable and sometimes intelligent comedies from Hollywood (as distinct from the Bob Hope stuff), there is little to compare with the two months' spell of "mirthquake" (apologies to the publicity blurb!) claimed by "Sitting Pretty" at the local Strand Cinema.

For, this picture has not only lifted the comedy craze to its zenith more than any other from Hollywood in recent memory, but what's more significant, has furnished an emphatic answer to those who so often lay the blame for the poor quality and want of proper appreciation of films at the door of our average picture-goer.

Undoubtedly the patronage that made "Sitting Pretty" such a roaring success in the city and accounted for its record run in a distant city locality like Colaba, was in no way restricted to the limited section of regular visitors to foreign pictures but comprised of a large number of those Indian women who seldom, if ever, see foreign films.

Evidently the brilliant, biting satire on the common ("typically suburban") habit of gossiping and scandal-mongering reflected by this film was the main highlight which attracted all the classes of people including even those who scarcely understand or follow the English spoken in films and in spite of the fact that the central idea of baby-sitters is foreign to a majority of Indians.

Perhaps the most interesting and noteworthy feature of the tremendous popularity of this comedy was the inescapable revelation that a number of our housewives (modern and otherwise) having 'touchy', suspicious husbands were not found wanting to avail themselves of this opportunity of dragging their hubbies to see in this film a classic reflection of their own mental make-up through the characterization of Mr. King played by Robert Young.

It is not known if these husbands have taken a tip from the happy ending of "Sitting Pretty" and will develop deaf ears to scandal-mongers or whether some of them have actually resolved to employ a baby-sitter in case of emergency! But there is at least one living instance of an acquaintance who openly attributes his success in securing paying guest accommodation in a suburban family to the "psychological effect" of "Sitting Pretty" on his host who was (so he tells me) previously reluctant to oblige despite the persuasions of his better half!

BETTER MANNERS AND PUNCTUALITY

Freedom caught us napping and found us soaked in slavish manners inherited from the 200-year old British boot. A nation's manners are noticed in public places like the theatres, the stadium or parks where people congregate either for sport or amusement or for politics.

Bad manners are particularly seen in our cinemas and mostly in the upper classes where people pay more money for seats and soon imagine that they own the entire theatre. The general behaviour of Indian audiences in the cinemas is most disgusting and provides a bad advertisement to a free nation.

Apart from spitting indiscriminately, wearing turbans that cut off the screen or talking loudly to the accompanying members of their family, perhaps the most annoying habit which people, who frequent the upper classes, have got is arriving late—long after the show has begun.

The late comers are a great nuisance in a cinema theatre where the lights are off. They cross a row of people groping in the dark and in doing so walk across the eyes of spectators who are already in their seats. Having annoyed a group of spectators, the late comers, often accompanied by their fat families and always by the theatre usher with a flashlight in hand, reach the gangway and then begins the scramble for wrong seats, which again disturbs another group of spectators. After a bit of pushing and stumbling, the usher is permitted to advance from the rear of the fat family and allowed to find the row where the late-comers are to be settled down.

That done the flashlight tilts up into the eyes of those already sitting so that the late-comers may know their exact seats. Now begins the squeezing in and stamping over the feet of those already seated in one grand clumsy effort to reach the seats. All this time the eyes of several spectators are screened by the black shadows of the late-comers and they miss quite a bit of the picture before them.

It doesn't, however, end with finding the seats. Having seated themselves, the elders among the late-comers make loud inquiries whether everyone else is properly seated. If there is a little portable piper, then the little one is often transferred from lap to lap till the bottom of the little one fits correctly the lap of someone. That done the fat members take a 'kerchief from the pocket and with a loud 'shhh' wipe out the labour of their arrival.

All this disturbs everyone around but those who come late never realize the glaring fact that a little punctuality would have avoided all the groping and stumbling and saved the others from unnecessary nuisance.

When cinemas widely advertise the show timings and are compelled by necessity to stick to them, it is just sheer bad manners and ungentlemanly on the part of people to arrive late and disturb others.

And yet from these late-comers, quite a few call themselves cultured and educated.

But this is not true only of the cinemagoers. Our provincial ministers, who preach morality and good conduct to millions from the Chowpatty sands, or for that matter from any vacant plot of land, are notorious for their late arrival wherever they are expected.

The other day at the special show of the Russian film, "The Stone Flower" at the Regal, two prominent members of the Bombay Cabinet kept over a thousand people sucking their thumbs for full 20 minutes before they at last arrived without even an apology on their official lips. And these very same ministers are supposed to set us an example in punctuality and civic responsibility.

When responsible ministers behave in such irresponsible and ungentlemanly manner (for it is ungentlemanly to keep a thousand persons waiting uselessly) what can we expect from the all and sundry who see our motion pictures?

It is high time that we exhibit a bit of our much vaunted culture of the past by being punctual at public gatherings and cinemas and begin behaving like responsible free citizens.

YOU'LL HARDLY BELIEVE—

That Editor Baburao Patel has come back alive from America leaving behind a bleeding ulcer, two-thirds of his stomach and forty-two pounds of solid weight.—And not even an aeroplane accident for consolation! Now producers think he has ninety lives and not the proverbial nine.

That one thing Editor Patel didn't leave behind in Yankeeland is his pen. He will need it here to carve a living from the film industry.

That Editor Patel was for once touched the way all and sundry, from the top to the bottom, in the film industry called on him for affectionate inquiry. For once he realized that every one liked him and no one wished him ill. That gave him a greater shock than the serious operation had done.

That Pandit Indra no longer sits in the Ranjit Durbar to wait for a free lunch. He is busy turning words into coins at the Gemini Studios in Madras. Isn't there a proverb about rats leaving a sinking ship!

That Vasan of Gemini is paying Rs. 24000/- to Pandit Indra for four months of Hindustani. That is some price for a tiny Marwari dictionary. Did we forget the free lunch?

That within a year of our freedom Director Chaturbhuj Doshi snapped his old shackles and renounced his title of H. M. V. He is no longer with Ranjit and has become a successful free lancer. They say he is earning a year's previous salary within a month these days.

That for sheer affection for a dead wife, Director Kedar Sharma can never be surpassed. In his new picture "Sohag Raat", Geeta Bali the heroine, was affectionately named "Kamo" and thus the dear departed Kamla Chatterjee's name was once again re-echoed on the screen.

That at this rate, Kamla threatens to become our permanent screen heroine and haunt our memory from day to day. It is a very touching tribute from an ever-loving husband who sees the dead one in every new living one he meets.

That the Pathan watchmen in Oomer Park don't seem to appreciate film actor Karan Dewan's noble efforts at learning music. When asked about the "noise", they say "Woh fillum walla roz subah bomb marta hai. Pagal hai". These Pathans must be chased out of India. They don't even know the "hero" of "Ratan".

That all the little children start howling and the dogs start barking in Oomer Park immediately Karan Dewan begins his daily vocal gymnastics. That is rather rough on our favourite hero who has ventured on such a risky enterprise. Let us hope, Saigal doesn't turn in his grave. The poor man deserves some rest the way he plied his golden voice for gold diggers.

That film actress Snehaprabha, who didn't seem to care for marriages once, is reported to have fallen a willing victim to a Bengali pilot who seems to have made a safe landing, at least for the present.

That film actor Kishore Sahu, ex-husband of Snehaprabha, is reported to have given a reception and a dinner to celebrate the marriage and the 24 who attended swore to remain life-long bachelors. Was the food so bad?

That of all people, film actress Shanta Apte is also reported to have married someone outside the film field and become quite domesticated. Now there is no more need left for any fasting stunts.

That instead of the brother, as in old times, now the new husband will drive our dear Shanta to the studios and look after the star's lunch and other needs. Pity is that it will mean going back to the "stables" as Shanta calls our film studios.

That the Government of India discovered our two best experts to begin its career of producing documentaries and newsreels—Bhavnani and Badami.

In "Angan", a musical of Alam Art Productions, Sofia has a touching role to play.

Husna has a nice role to play in "Dhanwale", a social picture distributed by Ruby Pictures Ltd.

That Bhavnani and Badami themselves have not yet recovered from the shock of their selection and Rungtas, the Marwari millionaires, are shaking them up every day so that the construction of the new studios may be taken in hand immediately.

That whatever Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru may say about cinemas and palaces, the Rungtas must get steel and cement to construct new studios for "Government" work. That is the Sardar's wish and you can't hurt him because he has got heart trouble these days.

That the Government is not supposed to know that there are at least ten studio floors, good old constructions, lying idle in the city of Bombay—studios, some of which the government had used once. The new popular government must, of course, have new studios belonging to new Marwari millionaires.

That freedom has brought us a heavy heritage of Marwari multi-millionaires who are putting their greedy nose in all our industries including films and newspapers. At this rate the Agarwals of Rajasthan threaten to be our cultural leaders.

That M. & T., (not mutton and tomato) but Makhkhanlal and Tewari, are the new financiers and producers in the film field. They have already produced six pictures in advertisements but nothing in celluloid yet. What a film shortage !

That M. & T., (not mutton and tomato) but Makhkhanlal and Tewari, are strangely enough highly educated folks but they can't see eye to eye at a film story and their first film story is still being written, of course by Chowdhary, since the last 12 months.

That if every producer in the industry takes so much time and care on his stories, we won't have any raw film shortage and there won't be any blackmarketing of raw stock. We must congratulate M. & T. (Makhkhanlal and Tewari, of course) for thus putting some social conscience in film work. The other Marwaris must follow their example. Chowdhary, of course, will help, though he is a bit busy these days.

That talking of raw film shortage Chandulal Shah has suggested the formation of a morality club for film folks where sour-faced independent producers may assemble and praise Chandulal's sweet and sharp tongue and thus repent for their sins.

That in suggesting a morality club for film folks, Chandulal Shah has betrayed a rare sense of humour—something we never suspected him of all these years. Why not ask the 'independents' to do some spinning in the club?

That while "independents" will be dumped in the morality club of the film producers, Chandulal and other studio owners will be busy using up all the raw stock and thus preach more morals through films.

That at this rate we shall have another glimpse of Ram Rajya with film producers burning the incense of social morals and Minister Morarji Desai presiding as the modern Valmiki.

That Keki Modi, the theatre multi-millionaire, who made millions despite the Excess Profits Tax, recently visited England to measure his nose length with that of Arthur Rank's. Rank's of course, ran out a few inches longer.

That Keki's dream of becoming the Rank of India is steadily taking shape with "Baghdad-ka-Chor" in Hindi, picking Indian pockets wholesale.

It is a tense moment between Dilip Kumar and Nalini Jayawant in "Dil ki Awaz" a social story of Ambica Films.

Editor's Mail

(In this section, the editor himself replies to queries from the readers. As thousands of letters are received every month—some anxious and several frivolous—it is neither possible nor convenient to attend to all. Selected letters are usually treated in an informative and humorous strain and no offence is meant to anyone.)

YOGESH CHANDRA WHIG (New Delhi)

Does not your criticism strain your relations with the film people?

Only with those who can't understand that a critic has to earn his livelihood by observing scrupulous honesty in his profession.

MANORANJAN DUTTA (Bombay)

Define desire and fulfilment?

Courting and marriage.

V. PRAKASH (New Delhi)

What does a woman feel in the midst of a crowd of admirers?

She touches the ceiling even if it is as high as the sky.

"Tired of ordinary gambling, the natives of the Pacific island, New Britain, have introduced a new interest into card games by staking their wives," is a news item. What do you think of this?

The race of Pandavas is being born once again. Man has always looked upon the woman as a chattel, and he often spits at his mother and proves his ingratitude.

Will you narrate an interesting anecdote of your life?

During my recent illness, I had a glimpse of Kingdom Come and I thought the other world looked more peaceful and happy than the one we are in.

A. NAGAPPAN (Coonoor)

Has God given us eyes only to enjoy the beauty of nature?

No! Also to see Indian film monstrosities.

CHAND BEHARI LAL (Delhi)

Just as boys gaze at girls, do the girls also gaze at boys?

They do it without being caught. They usually look beyond you and then take you in the eye. Boys are crude artists.

A. P. SHUKLA (Rewa)

What was the happiest incident of your childhood?

My childhood was one long nightmare haunted by the fear of my extra-strict father and a conventional step-mother. Even now I tremble at the thought of the million beatings I got. Some were well deserved but many were not.

K. KUMAR (Kanpur)

In England one is allowed to kiss a woman under the mistletoe. What is the corresponding convention in India?

There is no official licence in this country but you can steal one under a staircase if the woman happens to be yours.

KAMTA PRASÂD (Cawnpore)

Is education necessary for success in life?

Absolutely! There is no other alternative, if success is also to include some peace of mind.

GULAMALI HABIB (Bombay)

Are not the nationalist Muslims the unsung heroes of India?

They are the living dead. They are orphans in their own land, orphans who pay for the sins of others.

MRINAL K. DUTT (Calcutta)

Thousands of books are there from the pens of master minds of the age in which we get the clearest possible reflection of all anti-social activities. You cannot do away with those objectionable portions. But why are you so cruel about the films?

Books are read by the educated who have brains to weigh what they read, even if it is obscene. Motion pictures are seen by the uneducated masses who have raw, impressionable minds and by children who are too young to have a mind of their own. Book readers are a very small minority in comparison with the millions who see motion pictures every day. These millions need state protection from anti-social pictures which producers love to produce because they bring in money quickly.

In Kuldeep Pictures' maiden production, "Chunaria", Wasti is reported to have given a good performance.

MATHEW PAUL DANTAS (Sawantwadi)

Can a son betray his mother?

Nathuram Godse stabbed the very womb that gave him life.

M. G. UTHAPPA (Bombay)

What are the the sacred duties of a man and a woman in this world?

To make this world a garden of God and grow in it the silent flowers of devotion and service to humanity.

MANUBHAI SHETH (Ghatkopar)

When were you down to your last pie?

Approximately 14600 times, that is twice a day for 20 years.

What attempt in your life turned out to be a failure?

Everything I tried so far has failed. After 14 years of "filmindia", our producers have not given us a picture for world competition.

What characteristic of film people annoys you most?

Their consistency in remaining stupid in a fast changing world.

MISS A. N. KHAN (Lucknow)

Is the picture on the first page of "Editor's Mail" yours?

It was mine in 1939. Since then I have not been photographed. No enthusiast dared to.

Which were your best subjects in school?

Cricket and loafing. I always stood first in these two subjects.

ANIL PHOOKAN (Gauhati)

Another little thing from the land of head hunters, we are told, accompanied Protima Das Gupta in Bombay recently. What was she hunting for in Bombay?

Heads. They are better shaped in this part of the country than the semi-Mongolian nuts in your place.

K. G. MATHUR (Meerut)

Please describe your politics.

Congressman by faith, critic by profession.

How far has prohibition been successful in your province?

We have quite a few private distilleries I guess. The drunkards have become manufacturers now and thus promoted their social status.

At what age should a boy begin smoking?

When he earns his own living.

What are your views regarding temple entry?

You've waited a long time for your HOME MOVIES

Rushing to break their heads over a stone.

What is the difference between the dreams of a young girl and that of an old lady?

The old one has dry dreams—dreams that don't weep.

K. M. JAYA RAO (Vizagapatam)

I asked my friend to define "love". He replied, "A little bit of kissing, a little bit of sighing, a little bit of crying and a great deal of lying in bed constitute love." Is he right my dear Baburao?

No, my dear Jaya Rao. Your friend forgot about the hell of a lot of hard work that is needed to keep love burning like a flame and warming human hearts.

P. SANGANI (Amraoti)

I overheard a communist saying that communists are the best patriots!

A damn liar.

K. V. G. KRISHNA RAO (Ellore)

Do you attend night clubs for sake of entertainment?

There are no night clubs in Bombay as far as I know. I thought the night was for resting. In your part do they use the night for loafing?

CHANDARANA M.G. (Bombay)

Is it possible in the present day world to go through life without hurting someone?

Even the greatest and noblest man since ages who hurt none and served all, did, in spite of himself, turn one into a devil who murdered him. The present world is so bad that even virtue hurts.

MISS MOHINI G. A. (Bombay)

Was Shakespeare right when he said, "Frailty, thy name is woman"?

Shakespeare never said that, one of his characters did. Shakespeare never perhaps believed all that he wrote. He created different characters and put different words in their mouths to make a drama.

S. N. HARI PRASAD (Suva, Fiji)

It may be some news to you to learn that there are goondas existing in this small colony of Fiji?

I am not surprised. Goondaism is a part of every man. It is Adam's legacy since the Garden of Eden.

G. K. ADVANI (Transvaal)

Why has Ashok Kumar left Filmistan and joined Bombay Talkies?

Ashok Kumar has become a big businessman these days. His appetite seems to have increased.

N. VENKATESAN (Negapatam)

The greatest thinker of the present age, J. Krishnamurti, I am told, delivered some lectures on spiritual enlightenment some time ago at Bombay. Did you seize this opportunity to ask him a few questions?

Does he know a trick or two about paying the grocer's monthly bills? Once those bills are paid, I can also give half a dozen lectures on spiritual enlightenment. A Hindu doesn't need a Krishnamurti for this.

Bharat Bhushan, Krishna and Baby Durga look puzzled with some problem in "Batohi", T. K. Screen Classics' maiden screenplay.

Who is the richest man in the world and who is the poorest?

Very recently, to be precise on the 30th January the richest man of the world died leaving behind his immense wealth to the children of God, while the poorest one is still working hard to increase his bank balance by exploiting his fellow men.

G. V. BHARATHA RAJA RAO (Madanapalle)

What do you think when you see a picture like "Hamjoli" wherein a pregnant actress plays the part of a heroine?

I expect the baby to be born any minute and get disappointed not to hear its cry at the end.

Kr. RAJENDRA SINGH (Agra)

Did Adam and Eve marry each other?

They had no choice.

MISS FAIZ JEHAN (Madras)

What will happen if men decide to stop shaving altogether?

They will look like Sikhs.

M. KUNHIKANNAN (Mettupalaiyam)

Whom do you think the best leader in the world?

Mahatma Gandhi, who died leading and is still leading.

Can the bitterest enemy be made a closest friend by non-violence?

If death is a gesture of friendship we lost the soul of our nation through it.

MISS P. MAHANTY (Masulipatam)

Is woman a heart breaker or a heart healer?

Man never has a "heart" for a woman. It is his "pride" in which is reflected his affection for a woman. When a woman jilts, that pride is hurt, nothing happens to the heart.

F. J. A. SOMJEE (Bombay)

As soon as Sir Maharaj Singh took charge of his post as the Governor of Bombay, his first 'official' visit was to the Victoria Gardens. Why?

Probably to find out the exact difference between the inmates of the zoo and the people of the province.

MARRIS NELSON (Agra)

Why don't we see ghost films on the Indian screen?

Most of our pictures are ghost films—shadows of hopes that died during expectation.

Which custom do you prefer: shaking hands, or 'namaste?

Very often you have to wash your hands after shaking them. "Namaste" is a safe affair. It hurts none.

A. S. NAIDU (Secunderabad Dn.)

Is it correct to say that India was one nation before the arrival of the Britishers?

It was never a single nation since its birth as a land.

Don't you think that the Indian ladies' dress is more attractive than the Western one?

It is the contents of the dress that are important. I have seen beautiful Benarsi sarees wrapped like a bandage over filthy flesh.

Who is the living incarnation of the soul of the Indian people?

Gandhiji. To me he is still living.

NARI H. DASWANI (Bombay)

A woman is most essentially a woman. She is an echo and not a voice; a dependent creature unable to stand alone; a 'weaker vessel' whose privilege it is to serve and obey; a graceful body with little physical strength?

Where is this unique woman? I would like to meet her.

B. AVINASH (Sholapur)

What do you do Mr. Patel, during your leisure time?

An intellectual worker has no leisure. He reads, writes or thinks. And sometime he falls ill with books by his side.

SYED MUSTAFA (Madras)

Why is it that a man is more alive to his defects and imperfections than a woman?

Man gets a sermon from the scriptures as well as from the woman. Daily doses give him an inferiority complex.

M. S. TRASI (Bombay)

When Cupid's arrow pierces the heart, why do the eyes go blind?

Those in love keep their heart in their eyes so that the beloved may not have to go searching. I had an Assamese girl staying with me once. She was in love and her eyes danced carrying a heart in them and she named it "Moni". That was the name of the khaki mug.

Md. MAVAZEFF HUSSAIN (Masulipatam)

Is rickshaw pulling a good thing?

It has advantages as a ten-minute exercise for the legs and the chest but as a means of filling the stomach with food it is a cruel living.

Did you ever woo a girl?

Ravikant and Mohana, both newcomers to the screen, make a smart team in "Jagruti," Virendra Pictures' maiden social.

In Shree Amar Pictures' maiden production "Shadi-ke-Baad" Jyoti's tears are indicative of the woman's miseries after her marriage.

At 44 girls are children to me. I am interested only in women.

How do you differentiate between calf love and adult love?

In calf love there is plenty of noise and giggling. Adult love has poise and dignity. The first one is a nuisance to the neighbours, the second one an assurance.

Why is Naseem not to be seen nowadays on the screen?

Her wrinkles are growing, and yet she is still reported on the screen.

H. S. VENKATA RAO (Mysore)

Were you a victim of a dowry demand from your father-in-law?

I never waited to consult my in-laws. I took what I wanted. They adjusted their temper to my moods.

What is your pledge to the country?

That I won't be a burden to the state. That I shall work hard and earn an honest living.

S. RANGA MUDALIAR (Nagpur)

Isn't it funny that after the 15th of August we have completely wiped out from our memory that the Britishers are our enemy?

A free people can afford to be generous and even sentimental but the Britishers don't forget. They are more sour than before over what they lost.

To give nudity its thrill.

F. H. MERCHANT (Bombay)

Why has a poor man more children than a rich man?

The rich man scatters his seed in clandestine sowings.

OMESH CHANDRA WHIG (New Delhi)

What is the difference between a Mahasabhite and a Congressman?

One is the death of the other.

H. NAGESH RAO MANAY (Bangalore)

What have you to say about a person who begins to dig a well when he is thirsty?

It is better than drinking without thirst and being found in the gutter next day.

Hate is like a loaded gun. What is love?

A perfume spray.

How do you like the word 'inheritance'?

It means a bank balance to those who can't earn themselves—in other words bread for the lazy and lucky.

Are you prepared to sacrifice your life for your country?

No. I am prepared to live and work for it. Too many people are killed in the name of the country. It is high time some are asked to live and work.

MISS ELIZABETH D'SOUZA (Bombay)

Have you ever been broke in your life?

Ever? I have rarely been otherwise.

BHARAT BHUSHAN SHARMA (Dehra Dun)

Are you punctual about dates, appointments and so on?

I have quite a temper in this field with the result that even women don't keep me waiting. They call me a minute-monster.

S. LALL (Lhaksar)

What is the ultimate outcome of love in India?

Universal love often succeeds in winning individual hatred.

I have heard that you are very popular amongst pretty girls. Would you tell me the secret?

Pretty girls are often generous. They can afford to be.

R. N. SAXENA (Bhiwani)

What do you prefer: politics, social work, religious life or hypocrisy?

Politics, social work, religious life are all different shades of hypocrisy in the present times. I like film criticism. One can at least be honest in it.

V. SUBRAMANIAM (Madras)

Can we get another saint and holy man like Bapuji?

Not for another 2000 years. These types are very rare. They are made from the accumulated virtue of millions through ages. In about 2000 years, humanity collects just enough virtue to give us a saint like Gandhiji.

MISS MOHINI GUL (Kuala Lumpur)

What do you think of Protima Dasgupta's beauty?

It is eclipsed by her publicity.

MISS USHA (Secunderabad)

Will you please ask Sardar Chandulalji if he would like to adopt me as his daughter and give me half of his wealth?

Ask him yourself. Here is the address: Chandulal Shah, Shah Baug, Peddar Road, Bombay. But you will have to begin with debts.

SINDHU TAMBE (Poona)

A man though married to a beautiful lady is still seen running after nice ladies. Why?

A razor often needs a strop to secure a smooth shave.

A. V. NARASIMHAN (Hyderabad Dn.)

I have a very serious doubt. Do you think there are only seven wonders in this world?

The eighth one, though monstrous and shocking, was discovered recently. The world found a human being to assassinate a saint who took in the filthy air of the world and breathed out blessings every time.

Government Sets New Production Code !

Filmindia's Ceaseless Campaign Bears Fruit!

Irresponsible Film Producers Bridled !

With a view to ensuring that the cinema industry plays its proper role in the building up of a healthy national life, the Bombay Board of Film Censors has offered detailed suggestions to the producers as to how they should guard against unhealthy type of entertainment being catered to the public.

Although entertainment is the chief aim of a film, the Board avers, only a healthy type of entertainment, which deprecates what is harmful and promotes what is helpful, can be expected to recreate and rebuild a people and lead them to better thought and ultimately to a better life.

Though it took two years for the Government of Bombay to respond effectively to our ceaseless campaign against bad pictures, we are glad to find that the new Production Code, as endorsed by the Government, is mainly based on the Production Code suggested by us in our October 1946 issue of "filmindia". The new code is classified under the following seven heads:

(1) Religions, Faiths. (2) Peoples, Ideals and Morals. (3) History and Mythology. (4) Law. (5) Crime. (6) Sex. (7) Miscellaneous.

RELIGIONS, FAITHS

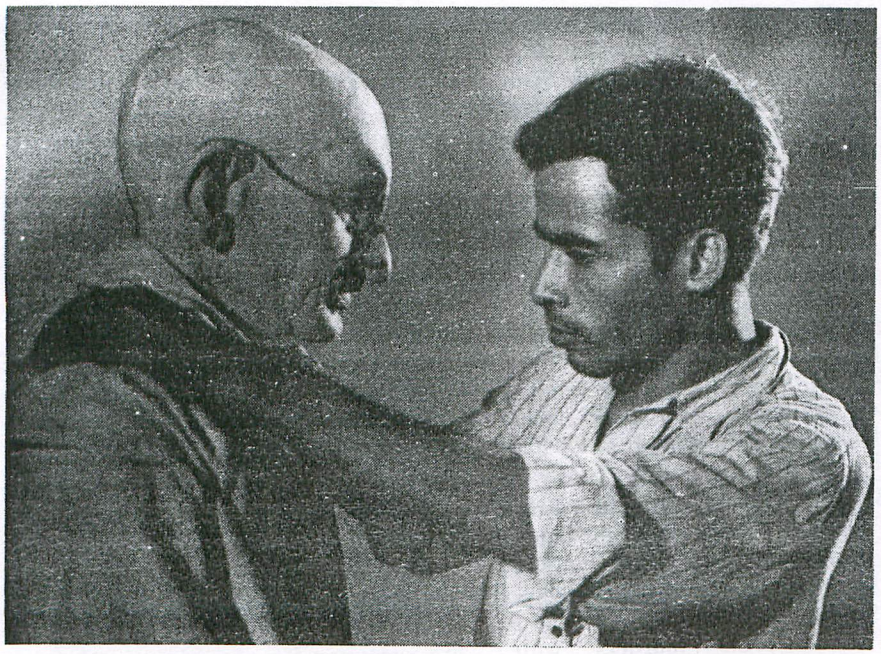
(1) Profanity to God, or to religions or faiths, or to their founders or accredited ministers shall not be permitted.

(2) All Religions and religious ceremonies shall be treated with respect.

PEOPLES, IDEALS AND MORALS

(1) Ridiculing or indicting a whole nation, its race or people, its citizenry, its creeds, history and culture, its national emblems such as flags or national songs, its nation-builders, living or dead, or its accredited institutions shall not be permitted.

(2) Costumes and behaviour of characters shall not be presented in travesties so as to cause ridicule, contempt or hatred for the whole class or community which the characters represent.



Months of patient and skilful work was required to prepare life-like models of Mahatma Gandhi in "Bapu ki Amar Kahani", a topical documentary of Famous Pictures.

Recruit Kamal Kumari c|o Hari Singh Bartaria, 28|16 Phil Khana, Cawnpore, is just 20, educated and sings and dances as many modern girls do. She is anxious to act in a good company.

(3) Noble ideals such as truth, justice, chastity, charity etc. shall not be ridiculed.

(4) Salacious incidents, obscene, ambiguous and irrelevant titles, obscenity in talk or songs or gestures, distasteful or prejudicial to good taste shall not be permitted.

(5) Treatment of low and disgusting aspects of life, necessary to show evil, shall be guided by good taste and shall not offend the finer susceptibilities of the public.

(6) No picture which will lower the moral standards of those who see it shall be presented.

HISTORY AND MYTHOLOGY

(1) Presentation of history, mythology, legends and classical works shall, as far as possible, be based on recognised documentary evidence. If dramatic licence is taken in their treatment, nothing which will lower the respect of the public for the honoured historical characters concerned shall be permitted.

(2) Characters of Indian or other mythologies of gods and goddesses, historical heroes or of sacred personalities shall not be presented in a frivolous manner.

(3) Anachronisms in historical settings, costumes, music etc., shall as far as possible be avoided.

(4) Obscene or undesirable histo-

LAW

(1) Law, natural or human, shall not be ridiculed, nor shall sympathy be created for its violation.

(2) Travesty of the administration of law or justice shall not be permitted.

(3) No act, word or gesture which ridicules law or creates sympathy for crime against law shall be permitted.

(4) No scene shall ridicule or produce total effect of bringing into contempt or hatred law-enforcing officers in the discharge of their duties.

(5) No member of the public services shall be shown to behave in a manner derogatory to the honour of the service to which he belongs.

(6) Scenes showing illegal production of drugs or traffic in forbidden drugs shall not be shown.

(7) Any scene showing or suggesting the use of liquor or displaying of liquor, except to show its evil consequences is forbidden.

(8) Wholesale beating, shooting or killing even as punishment for crime, shall not be shown.

(9) Controversial politics leading to class-hatred, violence or disorder shall not be permitted.

CRIME

(1) No crime shall be presented in a way which will create sympathy for it or inspire its imitation. Sympathy of the public shall never be thrown on the side of crime, wrongdoing or evil.

(2) Theft, pick-pocketing, robbery, dacoity, safe-cracking, mining of building or bridges, dynamiting of public vehicles, arson etc. shall not be shown unless they are adequately punished. Even when punishment follows, their gruesome aspects shall not be shown. Under no circumstance, an exposition of the technique or method of crime shall be shown.

(3) The presentation of third degree methods, executions by hanging, decapitating, or electrocution, even as legal punishments, shall not be permitted.

(4) Gruesome murders with ghastly wounds, causing excessive flow of blood or murder by torture such as strangulation, shall not be shown.

(6) Planned murder even by way of revenge for harm done, if predominant in plot shall not be permitted.

(7) The use of fire-arms, daggers, knives etc. shall be restricted to essentials.

(8) Physical assault on women shall not be shown. If at all it is absolutely necessary for a story, it should be shown only in a symbolic manner.

(9) Cruelty to children and presentation of children in undesirable environments such as gambling dens, house of ill-fame etc., shall not be shown.

(10) Cruelty to beasts of burden or other animals shall not be shown.

(11) Kidnapping a child, and abducting a woman are highly undesirable themes; if, however, these are necessary for plot, the offenders shall be severely punished. Me-

Don't Think About It

By

Antoinette Donnelly

She dresses well. She always is well groomed. She hasn't any of the unpleasant features that are supposed to bar one from social success. Yet, with it all, Miss D. confides, she simply does not register well with people because of self-consciousness. She makes the most awkward entrances and gestures, invariably bumping into something, kicking up a rug, or knocking something over.

That's Miss D's story. Allowing for exaggeration, we still see a bad case of self-consciousness affecting the young woman's success. We all are given to exaggerate points that we aren't pleased with and that in itself is a self-conscious phase. And we surely can lose our poise and sureness once that demon gets inside of us.

A remedy? The truth is that we are that way or get that way by keeping our silly minds too much on ourselves and on the impression we are going to make on others. Just too preoccupied with self, that's what's wrong. We watch ourselves, spy on ourselves, keep on thinking every minute about what we're doing.

What you need, Miss D, is to relax by caring less about how we do things. A little bit of the "I-don't-care" attitude never did a self-conscious person a grain of harm. That isn't a jury of peers awaiting your entrance into a room. No one is sitting in judgment or trying to make you self-conscious. That's something you are doing for yourself. True, you like approval. Who doesn't? But you don't want to walk a tightrope to get it. Simply wade right in and if you make a few mistakes, who cares? Laugh them off.

POSTURE

All this forms a good general rule for those plagued by self-consciousness, but it can do no harm to check up on your posture occasionally. The operative word here is occasionally—it is important to keep it occasional, and not make a fetish of it.

How is your posture? Have you checked it by looking at yourself in a full length mirror? Poor posture is one of the worst detriments to looking graceful, young, and vital. It also gives you a larger hip and waist line, makes your abdomen more prominent, and prevents your clothes, no matter how smart and chic they are, from doing their best by you.

It is easy enough to acquire this absolutely necessary asset to beauty. Here's an exercise that will help you to get the correct feeling. It's best to do it in front of a long mirror so that you can see for yourself just what difference good posture makes to your appearance.

Stand erect with abdomen well pulled in, chest up, shoulders back but not rigid. Put your weight on one foot and feel as though it were gripping the floor but let your body feel buoyant, as though it were about to leave the ground.

Now raise your arms over your head. Stretch as tall as you can and push your head up. Slowly lower your arms to your sides and hold that position. Notice in the mirror how much smaller the waist line looks. Your skirt or dress will feel looser at the waist line.

Walk about the room, keeping the same posture. Don't let it slump. Sit down and don't let go off that high chest position and that flat abdomen. If you have allowed yourself to become used to a slumping standing or sitting posture you may be tired at first but get used to the right way and you'll find it more restful than the wrong one.

Air Baths And "Dark Baths"

By

Paula Brody

Right down the ages baths of various kinds have held a high place in the beauty care which women have lavished on themselves. Still famous are the bathing habits of the Ancient Greek maidens who used to drape themselves in garlands of roses and mint and rub themselves down with the blossom of jasmine and lavender before entering the water. Equally famous are the baths of the Empress Poppeiea, Nero's wife, who used to bathe herself in the milk of five hundred asses whose sole function it was to provide this "bath water" every day.

Today we are a long way removed from these poetic and perhaps slightly crazy formulas, but the bath has retained its importance even although it has changed its substance. We must be content with two kinds of bath water—hot and cold—and even although our modern baths are not as original as those of past ages, they are at least equally beneficial.

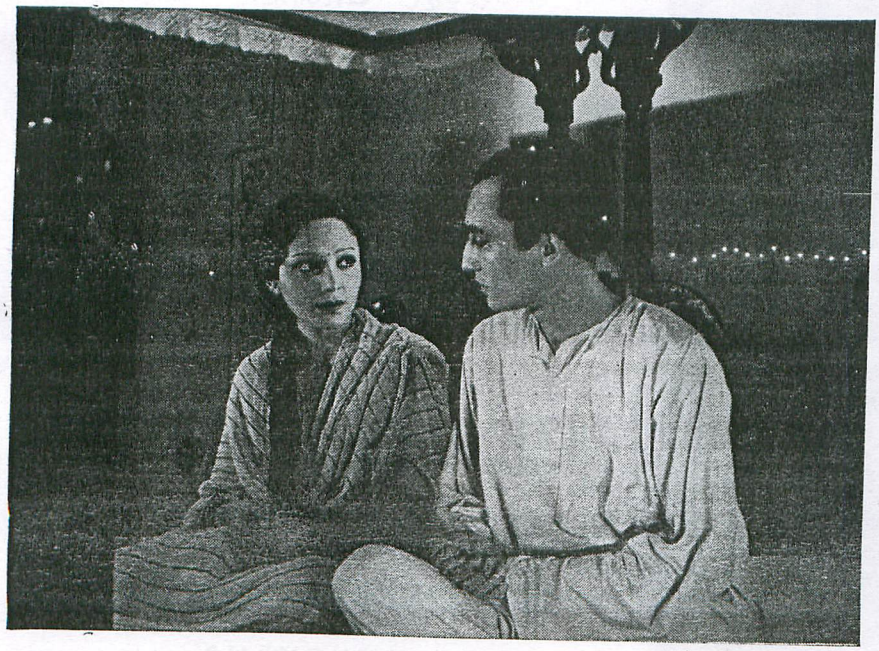
TAKE A REGULAR "DARK BATH"

The ordinary bath, daily where possible, has greater effects than appear at first sight, especially if one uses a brush instead of a sponge. For light scrubbing has the advantage of ridding the skin not only of hidden dirt but also of the dead cells which obstruct the openings of the pores. And a vigorous towelling afterwards not only benefits the circulation but is a potent factor in eliminating pimples and blackheads.

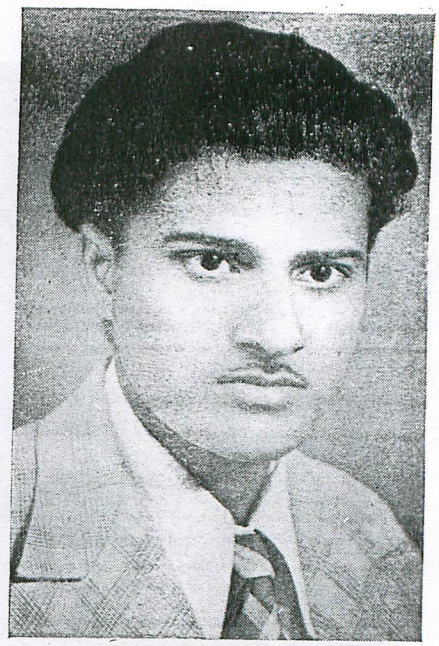
But there are other forms of bathing, less known and little used, which nevertheless have the most salutary effects on the whole body: these are the air bath and the "dark bath".

The "dark bath" is a sedative which brings repose to the tissues. Taken in silence and darkness it brings to the whole being a complete relaxation—muscular, nervous and mental. The more you achieve complete relaxation, the more effective will be the results of the "dark bath"; and those results will be smooth temper, physical poise and a spirit of cheerfulness.

For a daily "dark bath", draw all the curtains, stretch out on your back, with both arms alongside the length of your body, and let your limbs "flop" as though they weighed a ton. Breathe easily as though you were falling asleep and let your mind wander, without tension or effort, on any subject you find pleasant. In the hectic life which circumstances compel us to lead, if you accustom your mind and body to this exercise you will be surprised within a short time at the nervous strength this "dark bath" will induce.



The ever charming Devika Rani and Kishore Sahu seem to share a bed in "Anyaya" distributed by Diamond Pictures.



Recruit R. N. Sinha, B.A., Assistant, Irrigation Department, Patna, (Bihar) is 23, 5'-7" has good knowledge of Hindi, a taste for writing poetry, has played in school dramatics and variety programmes and knows singing, swimming and riding.

AIR BATH AIDS SKIN HEALTH

The air bath has entirely different functions. It is a wonderful aid to skin health. Without tanning, it gives the skin tone, glowing vitality, and is a good foundation for subsequent sunbathing. It consists simply of taking off your clothes and lying down for several minutes every day near an open window. You may feel chilly and uncomfortable for the first few times, but you will soon acquire the habit; and you will feel a sense of general well-being as your body breathes through all its pores.

Modern baths may be less romantic and glamorous than those of former times, but they are more in accord with this modern age.

Woes & Echoes

(This is the reader's forum—as and when space permits. From the producer to the lay film-goer, every one can write to the Editor and ventilate his grievance. For every letter published in these columns, the publishers will pay Rs. 5/- Letters should be signed and marked "Woes And Echoes". Photographs of the readers will be published along with their letters, if convenient.—The Editor.)

EXPLOITING PATRIOTISM

"Really I was surprised to see our national flag in "Sajan", which I recently saw in Delhi. Without any rhyme or reason the flag was shown and now it seems to have become a practice to display the Indian National flag in Indian films. Never have we seen the display of foreign flags in foreign pictures. I cannot understand why our national flag should be thus insulted by all and sundry?"

BHIWANI. Rajesh N. Saxena.

WARNING OFF

"Your reviews, no doubt, are masterpieces. You not only point out the defects in the pictures but also make suggestions as to how they could have been avoided. But I would request you not to go into all the details of the story itself, for in this way the film fans are likely to lose interest in the picture. On the other hand, a mere outline of the main incidents would help stimulate their interest."

NEW DELHI. Omesh Chandra Whig.

BELIEVE IT OR NOT

"We beg to invite your attention to the reproduction of a letter by one Wazir Chand (New Delhi) regarding our cinemas in Delhi, on page 23 of the July issue. The letter seems to be absurd and wrong in as much as it concerns the sound at the theatres. We consider it necessary to state that we have the best sound system at our cinemas; one theatre is fitted with Mirophonic Master Western Electric and the other with Western Electric Standard and the third with R.C.A. PG 51.

"All these equipments are maintained at a very heavy cost by having one special Engineer deputed to look after the sound and reproduction of projectors.

"The theatres are maintained in a most up-to-date way in all other respects."

DELHI. Lala Jagat Narain.

LET'S HOPE!

"I read with great concern Editor Baburao Patel's letter published under the caption "Stop This Slander" in the July issue of "filmindia". It really pains every Indian's heart to read what a good deal of malicious propaganda is going on against India and her people in Europe and America.

"The three so-called Indian Information reels entitled "Child", "Mother" & "Community" are but one of those innumerable examples to degrade India before the eyes of the Western people. It is the sacred duty of our government to see that our prestige is nowhere lowered in the world and that these documentary reels are immediately banned and destroyed."

DELHI SMOKE

"The Commissioner of Bombay has recently issued an order banning smoking in cinema halls on grounds of "public health and decency". The order also states that persons found smoking in cinema halls in contravention of this order would be prosecuted and fined.

"It is high time that the Delhi authorities should also follow suit and take some steps in this direction and prohibit smoking in cinema halls. This will tend to remove suffocation in cinema halls. Moreover, in the absence of "clouds of smoke" the audience will be able to see the pictures clearly—without having to strain their eyes too much."

NEW DELHI. Raj Kumar.

DISGRACEFUL

"It is a common vice with almost all the local cinema halls to have nasty, insufficient urinals or none at all. During the interval of a show the sight becomes horrible. People are seen moving in a hurry and they turn the whole compound into a lavatory. Considering the fact that about 90 per cent people in the major towns of India lead a sickly life, the present unhealthy practice may soon bring the percentage to cent per cent. Will the owners of the halls please provide a larger number of urinals for their patrons with instructions on a notice board in the local language?"

POONA. H. Bannerjee.

DEAF BABUS

"The three documentary films viz., "Child", "Mother" and "Community", were criticised by you in the July issue of "filmindia". As far as I think there cannot be any better criticism than that. But it seems that the 'Bara-Babus' of New Delhi have taken a complacent attitude in regard to these documentaries. Otherwise how could they be exhibited before the representatives of all the foreign nations? Was your criticism not enough to make the 'Bara-Babus' take some action?

"We have one consolation, however, that Mr. Patel was present when the slanderous documentaries were exhibited 'to buy' our 'disgrace', and his vehement criticism must have brought Dr. Levy and Mr. Wells to their senses. But there is only one Baburao Patel and unless the Government of India takes the initiative such 'disgraces' would be produced too often."

BETTER SHOWMANSHIP !

"Practically in all the theatres in Nagpur, the booking of 3rd and 2nd class tickets starts just before 15 or 20 minutes of the show. Even then the booking-clerk is seen terribly busy with some of his friends, who are none than the celebrated black-marketeers. Surprising to note, the constable who is always standing there, is so busy in controlling the queue that he is absolutely unable to look at the glaring malpractices. By the time half the tickets are sold, the cinema authorities knowing full well and realising the value of punctuality of time, start exhibiting the show, while the rest are struggling for a ticket.

"Naturally these people, when they enter the hall, find it very difficult to fix themselves with the picture which is, by this time, already in its full swing. Moreover, apart from being an unnecessary nuisance to the already seated audience, they experience a lot of trouble in accommodating themselves. But this has never attracted the attention of the management. Perhaps it seems, the managers have so far never tried to think over, what to say of remedying, the inconvenience experienced by the late comers, who for no fault of their own, are subjected to such troubles.

"Hence, I would like to suggest that the booking of tickets should be started at least half an hour before the commencement of every show, maintaining, of course, all the queues. It can well be stressed, that it is bound to prove beneficial to all and will be heartily welcomed".

COMMON CRIME

"Our taste for pictures has gone down so much that even good pictures fail to please the public. People want only love stories full of silly songs and hip-shaking-dances. "Kalpana" came here like a wind in the Rialto cinema. There were no photos of it at the cinema hall and no previous announcements were made, as the cinema owners do for other pictures. It seemed as if they were showing it merely as a stop-gap picture because they could not get any other picture.

"I went to see it again. There was no rush as often happens with other films. The film snapped and it took ten minutes to restart it. To make up for the lost time the operator did not show two reels as (he probably felt that) there was no need for them, though the whole story was based on that part of the film.

"At the end most of the people were heard talking, "What a boring picture it is! Only dances and nothing else! It would have been better to see some other picture." They were also advising others not to see it. As a result "Kalpana" ran for one week only. It shows that the standard of our film goers is so low that they do not like pictures like "Kalpana".

AMRITSAR. Harbakhash Singh.

WAJID ALI'S TRADITIONS

"I had been to Lucknow recently and I am really sorry to write to you that Lucknow, one of the important cities of India, has got rotten cinema houses. Moreover I found a new custom there in "Jagat Talkies", a cinema house in which A. R. Kardar's latest film "Dard" was running.

"People from the third and second classes were throwing coins on the stage while the picture was going on. In fact such doings spoiled the pleasure of hearing the songs of Munnawar Sultana and Surraiya".

JUBBULPORE. H. K. Mukerji.

IT'S ALL OVER !

"I am at pains to bring it to your kind notice that whenever a picture goes 'thin' the Management of the cinema somehow conveniently forget to switch on the fans. And this practice, I regret to note, is slowly but surely developing into a regular habit as it were and what is more, sets a very bad example to others in the line."

MANGALORE. R. A. Rao

GROPING STILL !

"Our present Congress Government have laid down rules regarding the use of our National flag. But what have they done regarding the manner of saluting the flag? This is as important as the hoisting of the flag. It is the symbol of Free India and it is the flag of our martyrs. The masses are confused about saluting. Some bow before the flag, some salute it in the British fashion, some in the Gandhian way, the Communists in their revolutionary manner, the Socialists in one way and many fall flat on their face before it like Brahmin priests before a deity. How grotesque, how ugly, will be the spectacle if at an important public function the various members of the assemblage salute the flag in different ways!

"A Government which has enough time to produce ordinances, to praise the deeds of Mountbatten, and to curb peoples' liberty, can't spend even two minutes for such a noble work as to prescribe a national pattern for saluting our flag?"

OPTIMISM !

"Your article under the title "Stop This Slander" published in the July issue of "filmindia" gives the most painful news. If it had happened before 15th August there would have been some excuse. WELL, MORARJIBHAI !

"Don't Murder The Mahatma Again"—wrote "filmindia" in its April 1948 issue giving a warning to the 'Godses' of the film industry.

"But are you aware that 'they' have already started this unholy business in spite of your prompt warning? The first such picture is Santoshi's "Khidki" which is running to crowded houses wherever released. Apart from the usual cheapness of such productions there is in this one, a particular dance piece called the Mahatma Gandhi Dance, wherein half-naked girls headed by Rehana give a hip-swinging dance praising Gandhiji's great services to this country of ours. It is so sexy and so indecent that I am still wondering how the Bombay Board of Censors working under the great Morarji Desai, has passed this dirty, stinking stuff! No decent Indian can tolerate this. "Deshabandhu", a local vernacular weekly, wrote strongly against this particular dance. But nothing seems to have been done in this respect.

"I urge you therefore to see this dance before it is released in Bombay and do what you can to prevent its screening there. If this one passes off unnoticed or neglected it will certainly give impetus to many more such sequences. Surely we cannot be dumb spectators when the Father of our Nation, who gave this country a new status and dignity, is being insulted by every third-rate producer for his personal prosperity."

DON'T SHOUT !

"I have seen "Gvalan" in Regal Talkies, Nagpur. The picture is excellent and has box office merit. Mr. Patel, I cannot remain without praising your effort which has given us a very touching and sensitive story. Shrimati Sushila Rani with her melodious voice has given life to the songs of Pt. Indra who ought to have composed melodies and not a mere jumble of words. In spite of all this "Gvalan" is a picture worth visiting to see your all-round successful score. The picture will undoubtedly give you another chance to produce a musical and a more dynamic story next time."

WHAT LESSON ?

"When Gemini's "Chandralekha" was released in some of the theatres in Madras in April, many persons were arrested by the police on the charge of blackmarketing of tickets and they were convicted with fines varying from Rs. 5|- to 10|- by the magistrate who tried the cases. After this the police are keeping a close watch over these theatres to see that nothing of this sort occurs again. It should be noted that this is the first time in the history of the South Indian film industry that the police have woken up to root out blackmarketing of cinema tickets.

EXHIBITING GANDHIJI

"I would like to point out through your esteemed "filmindia", the inconvenience that the public of Hardoi is facing at the hands of the "Laxmi Talkies" here. It is never certain whether a picture will be screened or not. The sound is also very unsatisfactory.

"Recently 'Mahatmaji's Last Journey' was exhibited along with the film "My Sister". The rates of admission were considerably raised on that occasion. As a matter of fact "Mahatmaji's Last Journey" is a film which should be exhibited free to the public, whereas, Laxmi Talkies, Hardoi, started exploiting the people. What is this? Is it not depriving the poor of the last darshan of the Father of our Nation?"

PHASE OF SHOWMANSHIP

"It is a pity that nothing has been done to provide proper cycle-stands at the local theatres in Bangalore. The theatre owners would do well to pay attention to the proper erection of shelters for cycles. For, after all, they must realise that it is the poor man's solution of the daily transport problem that faces the town-dweller everywhere in India.

"In summer it is not difficult to imagine the condition of bicycles after being kept in the severe sun for 3 to 4 hours. Woe be to the fate of the cycle owners in the rainy season! It can be better visualised than described.

"As things stand today, it is very difficult to get spare parts and other accessories. Hence it is difficult to maintain the cycles in good condition. As such, the theatre owners should realise the hardships caused to their patrons and give protection for cycles against rain and sun.

"Is it too much to expect so much from our theatre owners, Mr. Patel?"

SABOTAGE

"The exhibitors indulge in a mischievous practice, which is apt to be generally overlooked by the public due to ignorance. Repeatedly I have found that they, in order to save time, cut out some portions of a picture in case it is a lengthy one.

"The instance under reference is of Uday Shankar's "Kalpana". Yesterday in a local cinema I was bitterly disappointed to find a few beautiful ballets missing. The result was naturally the loss of continuity linking the different episodes.

"Will the exhibitors show some consideration for the feelings and money of the cinegoers who are the backbone of their prosperity? It is again a serious matter to be investigated and looked after by the producers as it concerns them and their success vitally."

PROPRIETOR

"Recently the 'Roshan Talkies' changed hands. This theatre is situated near the junction of tramways at the corner of Grant Road. To the original name, "New" is added by the new management and pictures such as "Shamsavera" are being shown. I went to see the so-called "New Roshan". Except whitewashing and polishing nothing is new and of course a new uniform is given to the staff. Otherwise there is the same old screen with newly painted borders, the same old seats full of bugs. There is not enough ventilation or fans, nor enough spittoons as a result of which people spit anywhere they like. To my great surprise there are not enough fire extinguishers at proper places. The machinery is old and so the sound is not clear. The sound of the tramcar passing near by is clearly heard inside the auditorium. The lavatories are utterly unsatisfactory. The foot path leading to the theatre is always full of filth. What is "new" in all this, Mr. Patel?"

It is curious to note that two theatres have different rates while both of them provide the same amenities. The following are the present rates:

"FILMINDIA"

" 'Filmindia' is a filmgoer's guide. By reading its reviews one carefully avoids rotten pictures which would, otherwise, have told heavily on one's purse. This fact is profitably exploited by the exhibitors here to serve their own ends. If a picture has earned the admiration of 'filmindia', the exhibitors display the review pages along with the photographs on the 'picture board' but if it has been condemned by 'filmindia' the exhibitors merely advertise in the papers that the particular film had been loudly applauded by 'filmindia' and thus they succeed in duping most of the cinegoers.

The act of this pacifist organisation in producing a film wherein a particular nation is being held to ridicule cannot be complementary and what is more it runs counter to the main object of U. N. "India is depicted in the films entitled "Child", "Mother" and "Community" as far backward in civilization almost bordering on barbarism. Proofs are not wanting that India is far ahead of many nations both in the East and West in all spheres of human life.

"It is a great misfortune that instead of cementing cultural, sociological and political differences that are responsible for the present state of distrust, and lawlessness, among the so-called progressive nations of the world, the U. AT HOME AND ABROAD

GLASS HOUSE CENSORING

Boston, July 26.

Once again, the Americans who chuckle loudly over an obviously vulgar dialogue in a Broadway stage play, have suddenly become sensitive and the Massachussetts State Censors have demanded deletions from Sir Lawrence Olivier's film of "Hamlet" before its American release.

The Shakespearean expressions which upset the censors are, "the rank sweat of an adulterous bed" and "to post with such dexterity to incestuous sheets." They also protested at the scene when Hamlet prepares to watch the play with his head in Ophelia's lap and addresses to her remarks with double meaning.

A similar sensitiveness was shown in regard to certain words occurring in "Henry V", another Shakespearean play, also produced by Sir Lawrence Olivier. Wouldn't it be better for the Yanks to stop and look into their own stage concoctions many of which, to say the least, are full of vulgar 'juice'?

WELL, MORARJIBHAI?

Patna, June 18.

"Unsuspected", a social picture produced by Warner Brothers, has been declared as an uncertified film in the province of Bihar.

With freedom, we are also getting a keener sense of social conscience and the interest taken by the provincial government in banning "Unsuspected", is therefore, praiseworthy. Will the other provincial governments look at this film once again? What is bad for Beharis must be bad for other Indians.

PICTURE PLAGUES

With the creation of the "cry balcony" a glassed-in sound proofed room for child carrying theatre-goers, the piping brats can now cry to their hearts' content in Memphis, U. S. A.

The "cry balcony" serves a useful purpose because it enables the non-child theatre-goers to hear the dialogue properly and the housewives can bring their little ones along without leaving them at the mercy of the baby sitters.

In India we need dozens of cry balconies in each picture house if the picture-goers are to see a motion picture with an appreciable degree of comfort.

It is also reported that certain dissatisfied picture-goers are clamouring for separate sound-proof rooms for people who having seen a picture before insist on explaining the plot loudly to their families and for others who eat nuts and make annoying sounds which punctuate the dialogue of the film.

AND ONE MORE

Patna, August 3.

Another evidently undesirable picture, "Matlabi" produced by Jagriti Pictures has been banned by the Government of Bihar throughout the province.

It is only by banning immoral and useless pictures that a new taste can be created amongst the picture-goers for better pictures.

UNIFORMED PRODUCERS

Within a single year of independence, we have had a wild epidemic of "freedom" pictures, giving us the most weird and cock-eyed versions of our historical struggle for freedom.

The latest one planned is a documentary film, 14,000 feet in length, and covers the period of India's history from the Battle of Plassey down to the present day. The activities of the revolutionary parties in Bengal are likely to figure prominently in this film. The new enthusiasts are the members of the Calcutta Police Club, who seem to be more anxious to dig up old crime than check some new one.

Let us hope the policemen do a better job than our professional film criminals.

MORE MONEY FOR IDLI

Madras, Aug. 2.

With the cost of living rising every day, the Cine technicians find it difficult to make the two ends meet with their present scale of pay.

The Secretary of the Cine Technicians Association of Madras in a statement says, "The scale of pay of cinema employees as announced and affecting the major sections of the film technicians in this province are found to be appallingly low. They bear no relation to any decent standards of living nor any relevancy to existing scales of pay. As the Cine Technicians Association has not been consulted in fixing the scales of pay, it is but fair that the technicians should protest

ACQUITTED AGAIN

An appeal filed by the Government of Bombay against the order of the Stipendiary First Class Magistrate of Ahmedabad acquitting Joseph K. Ignatius, manager of Advance Talkies, Ahmedabad, of the charge of failure to pay "theatre tax" in respect of cinema shows on April 1, 2 and 3, 1947, 48 hours in advance of the shows as required by the bye-laws framed by the Municipality, was dismissed by Mr. Justice Bavdekar and Mr. Justice Dixit at the Bombay High Court.

The accused contended that the bye-laws were "ultra vires" as the Municipality had no power to frame them. The Magistrate accepted the defence contention and acquitted the accused.

Giving judgment, their Lordships observed that the alleged breach of the bye-laws was in fact a breach of the rules prescribing the tax and mode of collecting inasmuch as no power vested in the Municipality to make bye-laws under Section A 58 of the Act except in regard Clause V of Section A 61(1).

A FILM NOT FOOD!

NAGPUR, August 2.

The C. P., U. P., and three other provincial governments have got together to produce a film on "grow more food". Each province will contribute Rs. 14,000 and with the amount thus collected, Mr. Someshwar Dayal, Director of Information and Publicity, the C. P. government, hopes to make an interesting film telling people how to grow more food.

The film, which will be 5000 feet in length with a couple of folk dances and songs, will be produced in Bombay with a cast of villagers typical of the rural areas in C. P.

If all goes well this is certainly the best way of training our masses and to that extent the efforts of these five provincial governments must be commended as praiseworthy.

CELLULOID MARRIAGES

Hollywood, July 21.

After forty-six years of married life, Natalie Kalmus, an inevitable name in Technicolor, accused her husband Herbert T. Kalmus of intimacies with five un-named women in a divorce suit filed in Hollywood on the 21st of July.

Herbert T. Kalmus's income has been estimated at 240,000 dollars a year and Natalie Kalmus has asked for permanent alimony. Evidently old Natalie had no colours left to make the rest of her life harmonious and colourful.

A similar break occurred with Louis B. Mayer when Mrs. Mayer asked for divorce after forty-three years of married life.

Nothing seems to be stable and permanent in Hollywood if half-a-century of married life can come to an end on the flimsiest of excuses.

Ruth died in the Memorial Hospital after a serious neck operation at the age of 53. Affectionately called, "The Sultan of Swat" and the "home run king", Babe Ruth had a kingly income in his hey-day and was one of the most magnificent sluggers.

During his career of 22 years as a baseball player, it is reported, Ruth earned a fortune of more than a million dollars.

Recently, a Hollywood producer cashed his popularity by making "The Babe Ruth Story".

Ruth leaves behind a widow and two adopted daughters and millions of crazy fans to mourn his loss.

May his soul rest in peace!

At Last A Decent Film From Filmistan !

"Shaheed" Is Good Romantic Melodrama But Where Is The 1942 Movement?

Mister (no longer Rai Bahadur) Chunilal, the Managing Director of Filmistan Ltd., while welcoming the guests at the special preview of "Shaheed", described it as "A romantic story with the background of the 1942 struggle."

For once he was right. But he could have described his picture even more accurately if he had only added that the accent was on the close-up of the hero and the heroine and, therefore, the background was thrown out-of-focus. In view of Mister Chunilal's frank admission that the picture is primarily and essentially to be viewed as a romantic story, with the 1942 movement used only as a background, one wonders whether the present advertisements of "Shaheed" as an "inspiring picture of patriotism" are proper as they tend to create the general impression that the picture is primarily a political epic. This illustrates once again the tendency of our producers to run with the hare and hunt with the hounds by diluting a political theme with inconsequential romance and entertainment for the sake of the box-office, and at the same time exploiting the prevalent patriotic sentiment by boosting the freedom angle!

UNNATURAL SITUATIONS

To Author-director Ramesh Saigal goes the credit for persuading Filmistan to take up a subject which is far removed from the popular song-cum-dance nonsense of "Shehnai" type in which this studio has been specialising of late. One had almost given up hope of ever getting a decent and socially significant picture from the Chunilal-Mukerjee team. But it seems that they were intelligent enough to realize (what the Birlas, the Dalmias and the Tatas seem to have discovered long ago) that patriotism, too, can be good business and yield fat profits. And so Ramesh Saigal's story was duly taken up.

Was it the author himself or the producers who put the story through the "Formula" mill? Whoever is responsible, the fact is that the inspiring tale of a revolutionary hero has been over-loaded with the most illogical, unnatural and impossible situations, for the sake of popular melodrama.

Ram and Sheela are childhood playmates during the Civil Disobedience movement of 1932. Inspired by the mood of the moment, Ram (who is the son of a toady Rai Bahadur) declares that he wants to become another Jawaharlal, while Sheela (you have guessed it!) says she wants to become another Kamla Nehru. Another friend of theirs, Vinod, who is the son of a Superintendent of Police, has the germs of toadyism in him even as a child and he declares that he wants to become an Inspector of Police. The children play these very roles in a play they have staged and the child Ram (in the borrowed voice of Ramesh Saigal) impersonates Jawahar and mimics a speech of his. This play, of course, is supposed to be a symbolic representation of future developments in the life of these characters, but the insipid handling of the situation and of the child players robs the situation of whatever interest or significance it is supposed to have.

Like Leila and Majnu, Sheela and Ram of course, love each other from their very childhood. But, as ten or more years roll by, for some obscure reason the lovers are separated, never meet each other, never exchange letters or photographs. No, but there is a reason—the same sort of reason which prevented the hero of "Sajan" full eleven years from sending a photo to his wife or mother. Ram grows into a hot-headed terrorist and, after the "Quit India" call is given, he holds up a train and loots the treasury. And, of course, Sheela is travelling by the same train. And, quite naturally, Ram, being the hero, has to take refuge in her compartment. But, strangely, they don't recognize each other and save the author from an embarrassing intellectual problem. Need one add that Kishore Sahu seems to have made "Nadiya ke Par", primitive and exciting. That means another box-office success for Filmistan.

Recruit Pithabas Mahanti, c|o Mr. M. L. Cotton, Asst. Inspector (A.S.) P.O. Volanthra via Berhampur, Dt. Ganjam (Orissa) is 20, knows Hindi and sings and has played in stage plays in Oriya.

Vinod who has duly become a Police Inspector also comes along in search of the political dacoits and it is his bullet that hits Ram in the hand,—and, of course, Sheela sends him away, thus saving Ram's life without "knowing" his identity. Curiously enough she and Ram do not recognize each other but she and Vinod talk as if they had been meeting every day.

Sheela goes to Ram's house and in her anxiety to meet him, she invades the privacy of his room, discovers her injured hero and, being a medical student, performs an operation, taking out the complete bullet (same mistake as in "Doctor Kotnis"). But it is, emotionally, a tender and moving scene and the Scenarist-director has well exploited it. From now on things move in even more stereotyped fashion. To save her brother, Sheela agrees to marry Inspector Vinod—who is none else but the good old villain of the Indian screen. Ram joins a fantastic underground organization and goes about openly singing songs in jeep-borne processions, very much above ground. Most ridiculous of all is the scene when Sheela persuades her husband to bring two terrorist prisoners (including her brother) home and you witness the unheard of scene of an Inspector of Police bringing two prisoners, charged with murder, to talk to his wife at midnight and leaving them with her, unguarded, with all the windows open. This is, of course, one of the many other incongruities and unnatural situations. And yet even these are preferable to the vulgar and cheap gags and situations we are used to seeing in other Filmistan pictures.

WHEN FILM RECALLS HISTORY

But all these are forgotten when Ram is arrested and brought on a charge of murder before a court. You even forget that the court atmosphere is unauthentic. You only remember all the martyrs who once faced the same situations in British courts. And it is not a film actor who stands in the dock but, may be, Bhagat Singh himself; and it is not a film that you are witnessing but the stirring history of our people's revolt. And you cheer when Chandramohan, in the role of the Rai Bahadur, enters the court to defend his rebel son, publicly renounces his title and proceeds to indict the British administration for all its repression and tyranny. In that moment of emotion, our deepest patriotic sentiment merges with the situation in the film. Not that what we actually see on the screen is so great but the memories it provokes sweep us off our feet and much therefore can be forgiven of the director and producers of "Shaheed" for giving us this unforgettably inspiring scene in the film.

PROMISING DIRECTION

Whatever the failings of his story, Ramesh Saigal proves himself to be a director of considerable promise. Though the production value of "Shaheed" is negligible, he has utilised the limited resources at his disposal to very good purpose. The handling of the love scenes is particularly good and refreshing. In sharp contrast with the tame and dull 'takings' of most Filmistan pictures, Saigal shows a flair for enterprising direction. And yet the amateurish touch is also visible at places e.g. in the childhood episodes, in the hanging scene which is very poorly shot, or in the crudely contrived funeral scenes.

So far as acting is concerned, Dilip Kumar steals the picture with his deeply-felt and yet perfectly natural delineation of the main role. Sensitivity and intelligent under-statement are the outstanding characteristics of his acting. Kamini Kaushal is somewhat overshadowed by Dilip and, while giving a fairly balanced performance, fails to rise to any histrionic heights. But the two of them act some of the tenderest, most intimate and most moving love scenes that have ever been seen on the Indian screen. Chandramohan invests the role of the Rai Bahadur with dramatic power but his court speech could have been saved from becoming a harangue by grading the tone and tempo of his delivery, gradually reaching up to a climax. Leela Chitnis is most convincing as the fond mother and gives the impression of intense emotional reserve. V. H. Desai is becoming more and more of a bore and was a misfit in such a serious picture.

"Shaheed" may not bring half as much money as "Shehnai". But it has saved Filmistan from being reduced to a factory of song-cum-dance trifles. May it be a beginning—and not an end!

Nigar Sultana gives an impressive performance in "Mitti-ke-Khiloune", a social story of Ranjit.

"Padmini" Has An Absurd Story

Good Acting By Mumtaz Shanti And Ashok Kumar

The success of Bombay Talkies' "Kismet" made the pair of Ashok Kumar and Mumtaz Shanti very popular among film fans. They had, however, no occasion to co-star in another film for over five years and so Wali Saheb thought of producing a picture with this pair in the leading roles, counting upon it as a big draw for the box office returns of the picture.

While the wisdom of this selection cannot be questioned, "Padmini", starring the same pair not only comes nowhere near "Kismet" but is a slipshod picture, which, although it may become popular on account of its cheap gags and a few songs and dances, is altogether the usual Indian film with the universal story of love at first sight and all that follows it, but with different ending. The hero and heroine instead of getting happily married at the end are separated in this one for ever by the suicide of the heroine and "Padmini" thus becomes a synthetic tragedy.

A TOUCH-AND-GO ROMANCE

Padmini (Mumtaz Shanti) is the niece of Jamadar Chhoturam who was on active war service for sometime and could not make remittances to his ailing wife, who was compelled to send her fair niece to work for her and her aunt's living. She finds employment as a stone-breaker for the new road being made in her village and is noticed by Ashok, (played by Ashok) the steam-roller driver on the new road, who forthwith starts loving her, forgetting the fact that his parents had already chosen as his would-be bride a girl who is actually living with his widowed mother at home.

Smriti and Pran have happy smiles on their lips in "Nek Dil", Light House Pictures' forthcoming film distributed by the Screens.

In order to win the love of Padmini, Ashok does her work at night time, and Padmini gets good wages for that. She is told by the Inspector (Mumtaz Ali) that her work was being done by a ghost during night time and she even ventures to go and see the ghost herself. Ashok Kumar, disguised as the ghost is seen breaking stones for Padmini and he tells her to be sweet to the engine driver Ashok. Padmini, who had no objection to doing so, shows warmer feelings for Ashok and their intimacy increases, with the result that they declare their love to each other. In due time Ashok goes home to tell his mother that he had already chosen his bride and the previous engagement should be broken off.

Sampson, the road engineer, (played by Sampson) who is a family friend of Ashok, meanwhile persuades Jamadar Chhoturam, who has returned from the front on a holiday, to betroth Padmini to Ashok to which the Jamadar agrees. As the betrothal ceremony must be done at a particular auspicious time, and as Ashok does not arrive in time, the ceremony takes place in his absence. When Ashok actually returns to the village he gets the news of Padmini's betrothal from her own mouth, but as she does not name her betrothed, Ashok concludes that she was betrothed to some one else in his absence. Not caring to find out who actually her betrothed is, and no longer crying over spilt milk, like a practical man of the world, he returns home to his mother and tells her of his decision to marry the other girl previously chosen for him. The marriage is arranged forthwith.

Meanwhile Sampson carries Padmini to the town in search of Ashok and they arrive there only to see Ashok being actually wedded to the other girl—Shakuntala (Nielam). Padmini manages to see Ashok and lives in his house for two days without telling him that her betrothed was none else than Ashok. Her subsequent illness and delirium reveal the fact and Ashok prepares to get married to Padmini, notwithstanding Sampson's warning that bigamy was a criminal offence for which he may be punished. Surely a steam roller driver must be a very rich man to afford two wives even when he was unemployed, and brave and chivalrous withal, for he ventures even to defy the law for the sake of his lady-love and asks his own married wife to dress Padmini in bridal apparel for being married to her own husband!

Recruit A. P. Chaturvedi of 23|30, Patkapore, Kanpur, is 18, sound in physique and has played in school dramatics.

But the story writer's ultimate kindness prevents Ashok from committing the offence and prevents the censors from banning the picture as one propagating bigamy, while Padmini solves the whole muddle by swallowing poison and thus getting out of the mess leaving Ashok and his wife to live happily ever after.

A FRUSTRATIVE CLIMAX

The story is both absurd and unconvincing. The writer has apparently fumbled in the end, wondering how to bring about the final climax, and has made a mess of it by advocating bigamy which he could not actually bring about on the screen for fear of the law. It presents a very complacent and accommodating hero, who if he could not get the girl he loved to wed him, makes no fuss about it, does not become love sick, does not suffer from heart-break or anything else like the usual screen lovers, but takes another girl for a wife just as a man would choose another car if he fails to get the one of his choice.

Apart from all this, the picture is quite amusing in the first part for the unintelligent spectators, mostly children of all ages between 5 and 55, with its cheap gags and punches and the elegant performance of both Mumtaz Shanti and Ashok Kumar. The introduction of a ghost in a screenplay is Wali Saheb's novel device which might provide some fun to children, but is absolutely crude and disgusting to the intelligent spectator.

In the latter half, the picture becomes dull and boring. Nearing the end it becomes absolutely unbearable. The fast tempo of the first half provides a glaring contrast to the slow, dragging action of the latter half and the forced illogical ending leaves altogether a bad taste in the mouth.

Ashok Kumar acts with the grace which now comes easily to him. Mumtaz Shanti is quite charming, free in her acting and expression of an emotional role and gives a commendable performance. Mumtaz Ali, however, has now started becoming boring with his old, crude, hip movement dances.

Naturally all the songs are love songs of "piya", "balam" and "biraha", but most of them have good tunes and good music makes them attractive. A couple of them are likely to become popular. The technical work is quite good and pleasing to the eye.

Shantaram's 'Chela' Steals His Master's Thunder

Chandrashekhar Makes "Banwasi" An Artistic Triumph But Doubtful Box-Office

Six years ago the editor of "filmindia" saw an imaginative two-reeler outdoor film made by a youthful amateur and liked it so much that he sent the film and the writer-director-producer to Director Shantaram who, in his turn, was so impressed with the amateur production that he signed up the youngster as his first assistant.

After six years, it gives "filmindia" particular pleasure to record that the youngster has made good and finally vindicated the confidence reposed in him by us. The youngster's name is Chandrashekhar. Our readers may not have heard of him so far—unless you read the assistants' names in the credit titles of Shantaram's pictures. But this name will be heard of more and more, from now on. A preview of "Banwasi" which he directed for Raj Kamal, reveals Chandrashekhar to be the outstanding directorial 'discovery' of the year.

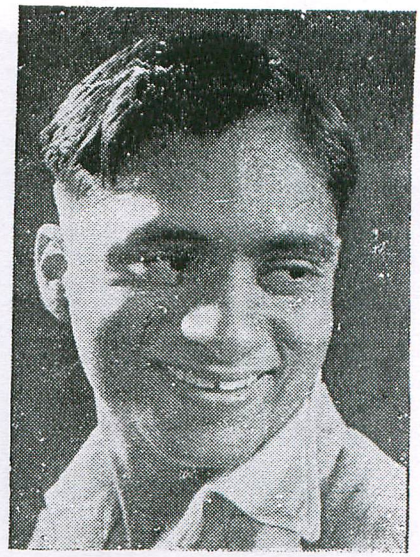
STORY OF THE UNDER-DOGS

"Banwasi" (Jungle-dweller) is almost a semi-documentary on the life and loves, customs and manners, trials and tribulations of the Adivasi tribes which inhabit the hinterland of the Bombay presidency. Occasionally one reads in papers about 'Warlis' when they come into conflict with established authority—accused of theft or robbery or mob violence against a money-lender or a zamindar. But few people know of the economic and social background of these tribes. how they lead a precarious life on the constant verge of starvation, about their primitive but nonetheless self-respecting code of honour. All this is brought out in "Banwasi". And since most of the picture was shot on location in that very area, the situations have a ring of authenticity generally lacking in our pictures.



CHANDRASHEKHAR

Starting with a documentary-type series of shots, the director introduces us to the Adivasis' territory—the locale and background of the film—in an original and striking manner, and brings us face to face with the grim economic facts of the Adivasis' life. But then romance enters the scene in the guise of a good old zamindar's son who duly falls in love with an Adivasi maiden. The struggle for existence of the tribe against the hoarder and the police is thereafter inter-woven with romantic developments. The soft-looking zamindar's son becomes sympathetic to the Adivasis and seeks to serve them—but there is a lurking suspicion that the motive is romantic and not political or even humanitarian. The real hero of the story, however, is the son of the tribal chief, an upright and self-respecting youth who takes up arms against tyranny, on behalf of his oppressed people. The way he wreaks vengeance on the wrong-doers is symptomatic of the violent reaction against exploitation and injustice. As a sop to the censors, presumably, in the end the rebel discards the ways of violence—by throwing away his rifle into the water—and joins the non-violent middle-class reformer in his welfare work, but not before we have had quite a few stirring and dynamic episodes.

These are evidently Ram, Laxman and Seeta in Ranjit's "Jai Hanuman". But where is the monkey-god?

BRILLIANT DIRECTION

It is not the story, therefore, that raises "Banwasi" to a higher artistic level but its cinematic treatment and direction. Here Chandrashekhar shows a mastery over the camera which many a veteran director might well envy. The imagination and skill he reveals in his picturization of the outdoor scenes have something more than the "Shantaram touch"—the youthfully enterprising and unorthodox angles and compositions place young Chandrashekhar in a class by himself.

While photography is excellent in the outdoors, the studio-shot scenes lack the natural tone. Some of the night scenes, for instance, are overlighted. Sound, however, has been very intelligently used to create and sustain mood and atmosphere. The montage and symbolic shots (e.g. of the waterfalls) are a tribute to the director's imaginative eye, while the cutting, editing, extra-large close-ups all contribute to the tension and drama of the climax. The love scenes are daringly intimate.

One wishes Chandrashekhar had been given a better cast. Mahipal, as the zamindar's son, looks a milksop and needs a 'touching' process before he can be entrusted with the hero's role in a film. Shobha Rani who plays the Adivasi maiden has a certain amount of natural grace and youthful abandon and gives a pretty good performance—but nothing very outstanding. Gyani, but for his typically Panjabi accent, invests his role with realism and sincerity. This old trouper can always be depended upon for a good performance. Vishwas looks his part as the rebellious Adivasi but lacks the requisite strength and depth in his voice. Paksekar, as the wily and miserly moneylender, contributes a creditable cameo of character acting.

Considering the serious and even grim nature of the subject and the absence of "light relief", and considering the banal taste of our audiences, this picture is not likely to be a box-office hit. But even then it will command attention for its progressive theme, its brilliant direction and unusual pictorial appeal.

Colourful Slander On The Orient

Korda's "Thief Of Baghdad" Speaks Anglo-Indian Hindustani

For two centuries the Europeans have ruled over or dominated the Orient, exploited the Eastern peoples—all the way from China to Arabia—but still they have not learnt the most elementary facts about the people of the Orient. They say that the British Museum contains the world's best and most unique collection of books, manuscripts and pictures from the Eastern countries. There are any number of British and other European anthropologists who are supposed to have made a deep study of the remotest regions and most obscure tribes in India or Africa or China, Thousands of Europeans—British, French, Italians, Dutch, Belgians and Americans have lived for generations in the "colonies" or West-dominated eastern countries like Arabia or Iran. And yet they do not even know the difference between a Sikh, a Rajput, an Arab, a Negro and a Mongol. If you don't believe it, see "Thief of Baghdad", the technical marvel produced by the Hungarian-turned-British Sir Alexander Korda who has a notorious reputation in the east because of his anti-Oriental creations like "Drums", "Four Feathers", etc. His "Thief of Baghdad" now speaks dubbed Hindustani and, under the guise of "Baghdad Ka Chor" is taking millions out of the pockets of gullible Indian children of all ages who are simply fascinated and over-awed by the phenomenon of the "native" language being spoken by Sahib actors and Memsahib actresses in a technicolour picture!

SIKHS IN THE COURT OF HAROUN-AL-RASHID!

To catalogue all the historical anachronisms and incongruities rampant in this film would fill volumes. It is a fantasy and much can be forgiven in a fantasy. But, like a caricature, fantasy too must have some relation to facts. A cartoonist can caricature Jinnah's thinness to the extent of making him into a flagpole or Ambedkar's fatness to make him look like a barrel, but he cannot draw the face of Zafrullah and ask us to believe it is Parshotamdas Tandon—because both have beards! Likewise, a writer (or director) of fantasy can (as in "All That Money Can Buy") depict Daniel Webster arguing with the Devil, or he can (as in "Thief of Baghdad") show the flying carpet or a winged horse. But he cannot show the American Daniel Webster wearing war-paint and feathers—nor can he depict the ladies of an Arab monarch's harem dressed in the transparent, body-revealing gowns of Broadway chorus girls. But this is exactly what happens in "Thief of Baghdad" all the time. There are even Hindu idols in a Muslim Sultan's palace.

Is Wasti trying to tempt Manorama in "Chunariya", a social story of Kuldeep Pictures?

The Caliph is not only depicted as a clean-shaven young man (because heroes must be so) but also he is blonde. Sabu, who plays the title role, throughout wears a loin-cloth which is something unheard of and unseen in any part of Arabia. Some of the harem ladies (who are mostly blondes) wear Spanish mantillas and other strange, non-Arab costumes. The Sultan of Basra is shown to be a Bikaneri Rajput with the same kind of turban and whiskers. In the crowd scenes you find all kinds of turbans—Marwari turbans, South Indian turbans, Viceroy's Bodyguard type of turbans, and turbans as are to be found in no part of India but only in British and American films about India! You see even Sikhs in the streets of Baghdad in the times of Haroun-al-Rashid, several centuries before the Sikh religion was born! And, of course, there is an elephant in the procession of the Princess of Baghdad—the first time surely in history that an elephant was seen in Arabia or Iraq. But then it had to be there. How can the "exotic East" be depicted without an elephant?

That the Western audiences lap up all such incongruous nonsense is not surprising because to them all Orientals are the same—the Maharaja of Patiala or the Caliph of Baghdad, a Kathakali dancer from Malabar or a Devil Dancer from Congo. But the amazing thing is that Indian and Eastern people also swallow this hokum. Through centuries of domination their inferiority complex has taught them to believe that whatever the Sahib loge do must be good and correct and superior to our own way of doing things! Moreover, though calling ourselves Orientals, we know little about our fellow-Oriental brothers beyond what we learn from similar distorted films. Thus the Arabs imagine Indians to be the prototypes of Gungadin, while Indians think all Arabs are like Baghdad Ka Chor. Indeed, the irony of it is that in depicting Arab characters in some Indian films, our directors also present the Hollywoodian conception of Arabs.

KORDA SAHIB HINDUSTANI BOLTE HAI!

The dubbing of Hindustani dialogue in "Baghdad Ka Chor" is far from satisfactory. The writer has used a pseudo-literary jargon regardless of the spoken idiom. It looks like the work of some Munshi who is used to coaching British officers for the Army examination in Roman Urdu! The dialogue, as spoken, is even worse—one has seldom heard such stilted, unnatural, affected accent. Sounds like Anglo-Indians trying hard, and very conscientiously, to speak Hindustani! Who was the dialogue director? Sir Alexander Korda himself?

As for acting, there is nothing much to write home about. Sabu, as the thief, looks as ugly as ever—it could not be an accident that the only Indian actor tolerated in Western films should be a dark-skinned South Indian stable boy,—but acts with a certain amount of boyish vivacity. The actor who plays the young Caliph, is handsome but is most unconvincing for the part he plays. And Rex Ingram, the Negro actor, makes of the Genie of the bottle a very human and pleasant monster—even though this creation of Korda's imagination is made to wear a sacred tuft of the orthodox Hindu!

The special effects in this film—e.g. the flying horse and the flying carpet—are quite impressive. But in this connection it would be interesting to recall that the American Cinematographer regarded the special effects (e.g. the flying wall) in Prabhat's "Dnyaneshwar" as superior to "Thief of Baghdad" which had won the Academy Award for special effects.

The technicolour, of course, is something of a special attraction for a film with Hindustani dialogue. And there is enough glamour and excitement in the film to appeal to children and unsophisticated cinegoers. But the wisdom of allowing the foreign producers to thus invade the Hindustani language market, too, is questionable—particularly in view of the fact that even the best Indian films do not get a commercial release in England and America. Beware, "Baghdad Ka Chor" is here to rob us! And rob us of millions which we can ill-afford.

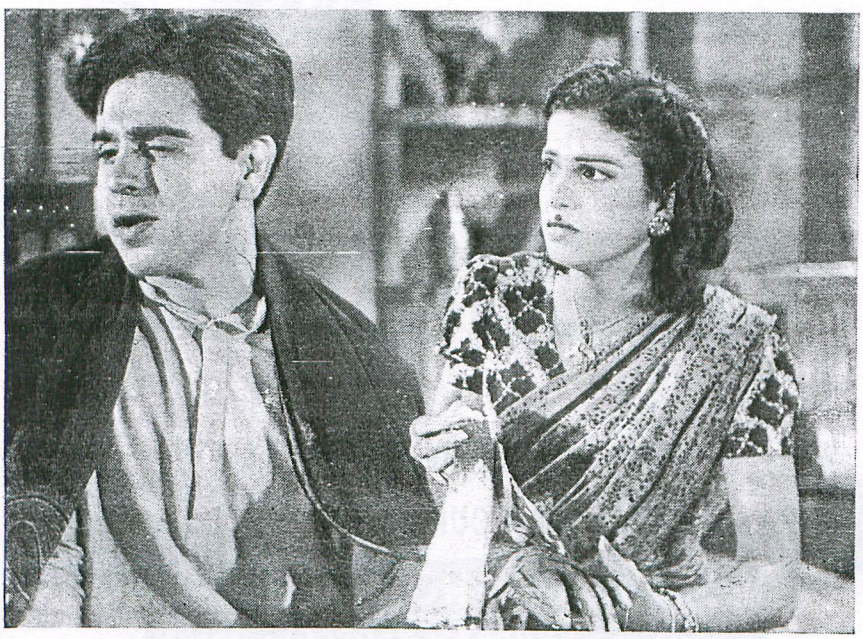
After a full generation of social pictures with the boy-meets-girl formula, it now appears that the Indian producers are earnest about changing the formula and a beginning seems to have been made by stretching the canvas of their themes to two generations now that the industry itself is a generation old. Therefore, instead of, only one boy (or two if there is a villain) making love to one girl and the two getting married after successfully overcoming all the unimaginable obstructions in their way and living happily ever after, we now see them getting married quickly and smoothly but parted after the marriage and birth of their first child. The second generation then grows up to youth and starts making love and thus becomes instrumental in bringing about the reunion of the separated parents. Thus the stories instead of becoming pre-marriage romances, now become post-marriage tragedies, with a happy ending all the same. After "Arsi" and "Toote Tare", two recent pictures of this new pattern, Ranjit, always quick to imitate all new patterns, now gives us "Bichhade Balam" one more picture with the new formula.

EASY ROMANCE

"Bichhade Balam" is the story of a rich businessman Dinanath's (Nafiz Khalili) son, Ramesh, (Anjum) yet studying law, falling in love with a poor, orphan girl Radha (Khurshid Jr.), who attracts the young man's attention with her proficiency in embroidery. Unlike the lovers in a film story they get married easily without any let or hindrance, but do not live happily ever after. Ramesh's father, Dinanath, is reduced to pauperism in his business and Ramesh has to leave the village and his ruined father, with a newly wedded wife and a little son to prosecute his studies in the town. The wife, Radha, manages to earn a livelihood and also spare a little money for her husband's studies with the help of an artist, Sudhakar (Qamar), who likes Radha's colour work and pays her liberally for assisting him in his paintings.



Kamini Kaushal seems to be a bit sore with Dilip Kumar in "Shaheed", which is storming the box-offices at the Roxy in Bombay.

Rumour takes wings in the small village and Radha is scandalised as having illicit relations with Sudhakar while old Dinanath is suspected of being instrumental in promoting the relations. A family friend conveys the rumours to Ramesh, who without making the slightest effort to verify the rumours one way or other, rushes home, accuses Radha of disloyalty and immorality, even accuses his own father—for whom he had previously shown great reverence—of pimping for his wife and leaves his village home for good.

Radha, with her father-in-law and little son, also leaves the village where she had been so much scandalised but the old man dies on the way. She reaches a town where she starts earning a living by her art. And 15 years roll on that way.

WHAT A TOWN!

Strangely enough in that same town also lives Ramesh, who has become a rich businessman now and, of course, Sudhakar, who has also become a famous artist and rich withal. It must surely be a very big town for all the three of them to live in it for full 15 years and more without ever meeting or ever even hearing anything about one another. And these years must have changed them all beyond recognition, for when they actually meet one another, none of them recognises the other. What strange tricks does imagination play with writers like Pandit Indra?

Sudhakar has a grown-up daughter, Pushpa (Meena) and Radha's son

Anil (Nihal) has also grown up. They are both at a college and fall in love. But they are not lucky enough to get married as easily as their parents had done once. They have to pass through all possible bad luck and hurdles in the path of film story lovers and ultimately when all clouds are cleared and the brave and loyal lovers have gone through all the sufferings, they are not only happily married, but they help in reuniting Ramesh and Radha, the old couple separated for 20 years. Of course, all suspicion from Ramesh's mind quickly evaporates like ether and he asks Radha's pardon which is readily given. The picture then, having nothing more absurd to give, just ends there.

IT'S RANJIT—FIRST AND LAST

To say that "Bichhade Balam" is a Ranjit picture is, perhaps, saying all about it but for the fact that this one has many more absurdities and greater boredom than Ranjit's previous productions, thanks to Pandit Indra's insipid story and Manibhai Vyas' crude direction. In this picture we see a college girl, daughter of a respectable, rich and renowned artist flirting in a manner so coquettish as to make even a professional street girl blush. We see a party of college students—boys and girls—on a picnic singing cheap 'qawwalis' with gestures usually familiar in brothels and a college girl singing with the 'ada' of a professional singing girl.

We see many other things that anyone with the least intelligence would refuse to believe, such as a loving husband deserting his beloved wife merely on account of rumours and accusing a respectable father of pimping for his own daughter-in-law! We see a college boy and girl starting love making while in their early teens and under pretext of going to the college playing hide and seek in broad daylight in deserted gardens, singing love songs and indulging in gestures and poses that are positively objectionable even from the view point of the most liberal minded persons. We wonder why the Board of Censors still allows such scenes to go unnoticed in social pictures. Such scenes are likely to do greater harm to juvenile spectators than drinking scenes, for, while no one starts drinking after seeing someone doing it on the screen, many young persons learn to start playing such tricks which, in any decent society, should be condemned as disgraceful and shameless.

PIYA-PAPIHA SONGS

There is nothing of art, music or acting anywhere in the picture worth mentioning. The songs, mostly abounding in 'piya', 'papiha', 'ghunghat', 'jawani' and 'bulbul' are cheap and hackneyed and none of them is even sung well enough to be tolerable. None of the artistes gives anything like a standard screen performance and throughout the picture there is not a single situation or even a single moment that would give any thrill or excite the slightest emotion in the spectator's heart. A drab, dull, meaningless series of incidents passes before his eyes and bores him mercilessly, all the more these days without the relief one obtains from a puff of smoke which is also denied by our puritan rulers.
